FLOYD WEST SUES FOR SEVERE INJURY

Brings Suit Against Southern Pacific Company for $2,950

ALLEGES COMPANY WAS NEGLIGENT

Was Working on Section at Banks During July, 1915—Rail Drops

Floyd West, of Banks, has sued the Southern Pacific Company for the sum of $2,950 and his costs and disbursements, alleging that he was severely injured while working on the Section under Foreman A. G. Stuart. West says that he and other employees were carrying a 620 pound rail, when one of the section hands, in going down a bank, caught his foot on a wire that was partially concealed in the grass, causing him to trip and fall. This threw the weight on West, the result of which was a severe rupture. The company sent him to their hospital in San Francisco, but in some manner the operation was not successful, and he says he has been unable to work since, with the exception of about fifteen days at track inspection. He swears that he is unable to do manual labor, although prior to the injury he was in good health and strength.

Attorney W. G. Hare has filed the suit and will press the case in circuit court.

One of the allegations is that the company did not furnish the proper tools for handling the rail, or the accident might have been averted. The case will probably be brought to issue at the coming term of court.

Northwestern hopmen are having a little joke all to themselves. Many received a "hop louse exterminator," which was sent from the East on receipt of a dollar. The package said "Not to open until ready for use." One grower became inquisitive to see what the package contained and upon opening it, found two blocks. The direction was "Lay your hop louse on one block and then crush him with the other."

Lindeman filed suit in Portland against Shaw, alleging that the defendant had inflicted serious bodily injury on him, July 16, 1915, at Huber. Shaw demurred, but Judge Morrow over-ruled, allowing the change of venue. Shaw alleges in his defense that Lindeman provoked the assault, and that he put up such defense as was necessary only to repel the invasion. Shaw swears that in backing away from Lindeman he fell over a wheelbarrow, and that Lindeman also fell over the same Irish carriage, and in so doing was, or pretended to be, injured. He asks that the case be dismissed and that his costs and disbursements be dismissed.

Defective vision, rather than neglect to study, keeps many children behind in school work. Defective vision does not convey the right message to the brain and the brain can not act upon the suggestion received. Are you behind in your studies? If you are and feel that it is due to defective eyesight rather than neglect to study, suggest to your parents that you have Dr. Lowe examine your eyes. He can tell you whether it is glasses or something else you need to do better work. Suggest it to your parents. Dr. Lowe will be at Hotel Washington, Saturday, March 11, to 4 o'clock. Scores of Hillsboro references. Remember the day and date.

This year's delinquent list for Washington County takes two seven-column pages, nearly full, while Tillamook county has four and one-half pages, six columns each. This means that Tillamook's list is nearly double as large as Washington County's. And so, after all, we are not in such bad shape, in comparison with outside counties.

JERSEY BREEDERS IN SESSION SATURDAY

Hold Interesting Meeting at Court House, Wm. Schulmerich Presiding

BREATHE SPIRIT OF CO-OPERATION

Some Good Addresses by Men Who Raise the Yellow Butte Makers

The Washington County Jersey Breeders' Association met here Saturday and held an all-day session at the court house, President Wm. Schulmerich in the chair. The new officers elected to succeed themselves, were: Schulmerich, president; George Withycombe secretary-treasurer; J. W. Hughes, vice president.

Papers were read and addresses made as follows—R. B. Denny, Beaverton, "Dairy Farming." A. E. Wescott, Banks, "Feeds and Feeding." Austin T. Buxton, Forest Grove, Co-operation." Thos. Williams, Hillsdale, "The official Test." J. W. Hughes, "The Jersey on the Auction Block." I. D. Graham, editor Rural Spirit, Portland, "Breeding for Testing, and High Feeding." Wm. Schulmerich, "The Jersey Situation in General." Thos. Withycombe and George Withycombe, general remarks.

The speeches were replete with information and judgment, and the general cry was for a higher co-operation among breeders of Jersey strains. The test of stock was dwelt upon with emphasis, and the value of a test to show what a strain can do was plainly put.

The talks on testing as a value to dairymen were replete with wisdom. The thought expressed was that testing was of the greatest possible value because it helped the dairyman or breeder to eliminate the poor cow, so that her offspring would not perpetuate the poor milking strain. Even overfeeding for test had its virtues as an indication of what could be done in the individual, although a conservative ration and even feeding was considered the best in the long run, as this meant a long milking period during producing life.

The association dined at the Hotel Washington. Those attending the session were Messrs. Thos. Williams, A. E. Wescott, Dr. D. W. Brook, Wm. Schulmerich, R. B. Denny, J. W. Hughes, I. D. Graham, Thos. Withycombe, John Boyd, R. G. Lilly, Geo. Biersdorf, A. T. Buxton, A. E. Kirts, Geo. Withycombe.

KEEP CONVICTED

Joseph R. Keep, formerly a well known Oregon timberman, was found guilty of a land swindle by a jury in the court of Circuit Judge Phelps, Portland, in a verdict returned late Wednesday night.

Frank Van Strahlen, a farmer of Washington County, was the victim in the $3000 fraud for which Keep was just tried. In this case, Keep, in 1911, gave a deed to some property in Eastern Oregon to which he had no legal title to his son-in-law, Emil C. Janin, of Portland. No money changed hands in the transaction. Mr. Janin executed a mortgage to the amount of $3000, which was given to Keep, Nov. 15, 1912. This mortgage was in favor of Wm. C. Borchers, who advertised it for sale, and on Feb. 4, 1913, assigned it to Mr. Van Strahlen for $3000.
