Latest information about the New Grant SIX from the Grant Motor Company, Findlay, Ohio

A Beauty Car

You will be surprised at the beauty of the new Grant Six.

Without question it is one of the handsomest cars of the year.

Its body not only has beautiful lines but correct and graceful proportions.

It is of the modified hood-line type. Smooth, unbroken lines from front to rear; no moldings; doors are flush and extra wide, "U" shape.

The finish is unusually fine. Body in Brewster green; fenders, hood and chassis in black enamel.

Seats are extra wide. A six-foot man can stretch his legs with comfort in both front or rear seat.

Cushions are soft and deep. Upholstery is luxurious. It is difficult to imagine greater comfort, more real luxury.

Grant Six carries five passengers with solid comfort. And the 1916 Six has finer steering gear, larger brakes, greater gasoline capacity, handsome radiator—refined and improved at every point.

A Wonder Motor

The Unit Power plant of the Grant Six excites admiration.

We urge comparison of the motor with any six at any price.

Grant Six motor is 34 1/2, overhead valves, exclusive Grant design—Replaceable tappets—noiseless. Unit Power plant.

Overhead valve motors are highest in cost—but they deliver the most power with the greatest economy.

Grant owners average 24 miles to the gallon of gasoline—900 miles to the gallon of oil.

And Grant Six throttles down to 1 1/2 miles an hour and hangs on. Speeds up to 50 miles within a few blocks—and has the quietest getaway, the swiftest action you ever saw in a motor.

Rayfield Carburetor, Atwater Kent Ignition, Allis-Chalmers Starting motor and generator. Extra large battery carried in steel basket under front of right running board fender.

But—it isn't the specifications that make the motor worth while; it's the motor that makes the specifications worth while.

Last season dealers couldn't get enough of them. The still greater value makes it safe to predict an even stronger demand this season.

We Suggest a Demonstration

Before you buy any car at any price get a road demonstration of a Grant Six.

That suggestion is based on the idea that you honestly want the MOST for your money.

Not the most in weight nor the most in showiness—but

THE MOST IN VALUE—the most in CAR worth.

Grant Six offers you the largest, roomiest body of any car below a thousand dollars.

It offers you the smoothest, most powerful motor.

It offers you the most substantial chassis—frame, axles, wheels, transmission, spring construction.

It gives you the handsomest body lines—and a thoroughly proven construction.

It is the SIX of economy and therefore the SIX of greatest luxury.

Its price is $795 complete. Last season dealers couldn't get enough of them. The still greater value makes it safe to predict an even stronger demand this season.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC CO. PAYS HALF ITS TAX

Sends Check Covering Rail Lines and all Railroad Property

NOTHING PAID ON LAND HOLDINGS

Total Receipts of Sheriff, on Taxes, Amount to $155,000 Today

With five full days for tax collection, until April 5, the sheriff's office is already in receipt of $155,000 payments on taxes for the current year. Of this amount perhaps 75 per cent. represents half-payments.

The next few days will be more than busy for the collection force, and it is expected that a record run will be made at the counter in payments.

The Southern Pacific yesterday sent in its half payment on the roadbeds and rights of way, depots, etc., strictly railroad properties, for the West Side, the Yamhill divisions, Beaverton, Willburg, and P. R. & N. roads, and the paper called for $15,019.15. Nothing has been paid on their land holdings, and this appears to be a matter that will be determined largely by the legislation of Congress.

Under the state law the company will be obliged to pay on at least $2.50 per acre as the minimum, and whether more or not no one appears to know.

"Inspiration," the film at the Liberty, tonight, is one of the educational plays of the year. Anyone who is so vile-minded as to think evil of the screen is too far gone to appreciate the beautiful in art or nature. The model starring in the picture is one of the world-famed, and to many the way that art groups are made will be a revelation.

MARRYING A HUMORIST

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Bessie Banks' mother declared that her daughter was born smiling and that she laughed heartily six weeks before the ordinary child, male or female, even cracks a smile. As she grew up she became more smiling still. In the same village lived Henry White, a young man of solemn thought and solemn face. Nobody had ever discovered that he had a laugh. Once in a great while a fleeting smile crossed his face. He was a carpenter by trade, and he took life as seriously as if it was fated that he should fall from a scaffold next day and break his neck. He was attracted to Miss Bessie by her laugh, and he reasoned it out: "It is time I should get a wife. Everybody says I am too solemn and serious, and I guess they are right about it. It would not do for me to marry a solemn, serious girl. I shall therefore marry one who can live me up and make me smile and laugh as other folks do. Bessie Banks would do it. I shall therefore marry her if she will have me."

He tried about a dozen times to tell her of his great desire, and she helped him with a merry laugh. The more she laughed the more courage she gave him and the firmer his mind was made up never to marry any girl who was lacking in mirth. In due time the words were spoken and a favorable answer received. Then the marriage day was set, and in due time also that day arrived. In due time Henry White knocked off his job of shingling a roof of a kitchen and went to a livery stable for a horse and buggy. He was to call at her house at a certain hour, and they were to drive five miles out into the country to be married by a minister who was a cousin to him. He arrived at the house expecting her to be all ready and to smile and laugh as she came out to take a seat beside him.

To Henry's great astonishment the bride to be was not at home and waiting for him, although the hour had been named the previous evening. Miss Bessie's mother said there must be some mistake about it, as her daughter had gone to a neighbor's a mile away and would not be back for several hours. Henry had worked up a smile as he drove up to the gate of the Banks' residence, but it quickly faded and became a very solemn thing. He drove away in search of the bride, and she came out to the gate with the same old merry laugh on her lips.

"How is this?" asked Henry. "We were to be married at this hour. Have you backed out?" "Oh, no, no, no," was the reply. "You see, I thought it would be a good joke to run away from you and make you hunt me up."

"That was her first joke" as a bride, and Henry soon discovered that a solemn, serious girl would have made him less trouble than a merry one. They had not been home for two weeks before he came to supper one evening to find that the only evidence of a meal was a dish of sliced cucumbers and some very cold tea.

"Why, what does this mean?" he asked as he took his chair and looked over the table.

"I wanted to play you a joke," was the reply, followed by a peal of laughter.

"But I can't see the joke," protested the hungry carpenter, who knew there was a plenty in the house to eat.

"Oh, it's so funny, it's so funny, Henry! I wish you could see how solemn your face looks. I am afraid you are not going to be much of a joker."

The next "good joke" played on Henry was a few days later. He came home to find twelve cuts in the sitting room, and they were engaged in a lively row as he entered.

"For heaven's sake! What are all these cuts doing?" he demanded.

All the answer he got was a merry peal of laughter, and he grabbed the broom and went in among the fighting felices and drove them out of the house with many a poke and whack.

There was one more "joke." One day a tin peddler came along, and as some of his wares were wanted in the house and Bess had no money with which to buy, she traded Henry's Sunday suit and a rug or two in exchange. "Exchange" meant in this case that she had to dispose of about $15 worth of articles for about $3 of tinware, and yet when the husband came home she was all a-flutter to tell him of the great bargain she had made and the joke she had worked off on the peddler. She smiled and laughed and chuckled, but Henry broke out into words of indignation and even indulged in threats. She laughed at his words and that night she crept softly out of bed and returned to her father's house, and when Henry visited her next morning her father and mother and herself said:

"Henry, you are too solemn. No one can drive a joke into your head with a sledge hammer. It is better that you and Bessie separate and get a divorce and that you marry Abigail Jones, who is an old maid of forty years and who is so solemn that she would not fetch a smile if she saw any one fall over a snuffing box on the sidewalk."

And at last accounts poor Henry was keeping bachelor's hall by himself and looking as solemn as a rock by the roadside, and Bessie was laughing to everybody she met about her trying to make a born owl see the point in her joke. They have not got together again yet and probably never will. There was too much fun on one side and too much solemnity on the other.

One wonders what Mr. Booth's attitude would have been on the land grant legislation had he been elected to the Senate. Senator Chamberlain has fought hard to turn some funds into the state school fund and into the various road funds of the land grant counties, and he is finding it hard sledding. It begins to look as though he will pull out something substantial, but it is going to mean some hard work. Chamberlain's constructive work appears to be laying a foundation when he will be held in grateful remembrance by the people of the state.

Perhaps Woodrow Wilson recognizes as well as any just who are trying to force the United States into war at all quarters. His is a trying position, but the attitude of the interests is so palpable that even he who runs may read. We shall take off our hat to Woodrow if he shall succeed in getting Villa, by hook or crook, and then makes his way back to American soil without the imbroiglio hoped for by the ammunition peddlers headed by Morgan & Co.

The reputation of E B Tongue as a capable district attorney is state wide, and his successes have all been earned by perseverance, and tenacity of purpose. He graces the position with an ability second to none in the Oregon bar, and his nomination by the republicans will be a graceful tribute to his worth.
