John Philip Sousa by Walt Mason

The March King's stately name is known wherever music holds its own, wherever drums and cymbals throb, and orchestras hold down their job. A Sousa march-just mention that, and mark how people smile thereat; they know what Sousa's music is; it's melody without the fizz; it's full of energy and pep, and makes old graybeards dance a step; they hear the sound of marching men, of chargers trotting down the glen, the shock of battle and the roar, and billows beating on the shore. And Sousa, when he would compose that music which the whole world knows, fills up his pipe with good old "Tux" (name t'other brands, and he says, "Shucks!"). Tuxedo is the smoke of men who do big things with lyre or pen, who make the old world's wheels go round, whose names will down the ages sound.

"All the aim, energy and enthusiasm we put into the playing of 'The Stars and Stripes For-ever' we find in thesteady use of Tuxedo."

I was some time getting the informa tion I desired, for there was only on person who knew what the king had decided to do, and that was the king himself. Indeed, I got the information, not from a person, but from my own observation. Sometimes the plainest thing to a woman is that for which she can give no reason. I soon knew that King Ferdinand would take the German side How I knew it I cannot tell you, though it was as plain as the nose of the king's face, and every one who has seen him or his picture knows that his nose is not to be mis taken for any other use.

Returning to Mr. Fauntieroy, I told him that the king would jump toward Berlin When I was asked the source of my information I said that I had succeeded in making a hiding in a room where the king had received a deputation of Bulgarian magnates, who had come to protest against his mafesty's taking sides with Germany. and I was convinced that he was fooling them. Mr. Fauntieroy asked me how I knew the king was fooling them. and I replied. "Just as any woman knows when a man is not to be trusted."

Mr. Fauntleroy said he reckoned I was not cut out for a spy, though he offered to pay me for my work. I declined to take anything
