MAN OF SEVENTY-SIX IS FATHER OF TWINS

Hillsboro Capitalist Presented by Wife With Pair of Daughters
AGED EX-BANKER IS ROOSEVELTIAN
Oregon, and Particularly Washington County, Leads the List

Hillsboro was augmented with a pair of twin daughters, Tuesday, Dec. 5, 1916, when Mrs. J. W. Shute, wife of the capitalist, presented her husband with two girls, the little arrivals weighing four pounds each. Mother and children are doing nicely, and the happy father is receiving congratulations.

The proud father was aged exactly 76 years, nine months and twenty-two days when the little daughters arrived.

Mr. Shute was born in New York, Feb. 17, 1840, and came to Hillsboro in 1858. He farmed near Oreneo for years, and in 1888 established the first bank in Hillsboro, being one of the incorporators of the First National bank. After the First National was dissolved he continued in the banking business until the American National was formed, when he retired. He is worth probably close to a quarter of a million.

The mother was formerly Miss E. Smith, and they were married in 1897. She is 39 years of age.

The following wire left this office yesterday:

"Theodore Roosevelt, Oyster Bay; J. W. Shute, worth quarter million, was presented with twin daughters, Dec. 5. The happy father was aged 76 years, 9 months and 22 days when the daughters arrived, and is as active as a man of 50."

A New Year Day Contest

By F. A. MITCHEL

It is now something like forty years since the custom of making calls on New Year's day died suddenly. It began in New Amsterdam—now New York—having been brought over from Holland when Manhattan Island was settled by the Dutch.

About the middle of the nineteenth century, when the custom of calling on the 1st of January was observed by all classes, two colored gentlemen of the blue grass region of Kentucky were rivals for the hand of the same dusky girl. They happened to make up their minds to propose to her on the same evening. Mose Jinks was in the act of declaring himself when in came Pete Carpenter for the same purpose and surprised his rival pouring forth his love.

"Yo' git right out o' heyer," said Pete. "Wha' yo' think—dat Sarah Ann's gwine to put up with any seh nigger as you?"

"Do you spect dat Sarah Ann's gwine to take up with a field hand lak you—dat a house sarvent—a lady's maid, too—is gwine to marry a good for nothin' co'n hoer?"

"Reckon Sarah Ann knows what she's about."

"Spec she does. She's gwine to tak me."

"She's gwine to tak me."

"Mornwhile Sarah Ann stood a spectator to this struggle for her hand. But at this point both suitors looked at her appealingly. Finding herself called upon to decide between her two suitors, she said:

"I feels mighty complemented at bein' axed by two seh gemmen and yo' hobe so fine that I don't know which to take."

"Tuk' one or de oder," said Mose. "Tuk' de oder; dat's me," said Pete. "I tell yo' what I do, Tomorry's New Year's day. You two come here tomorry afternoon at fon' o'clock, and de one whate's made de mos' calls I take."

"Dat's fair enough," said Pete. "Heh! If yo' hadn't interferred I'd been engaged by dis time," said Mose. However, Sarah Ann would not decide between them in any other way, and Mose was obliged to consent. It was arranged that a committee of three be appointed by the lady to arrange the terms of the contest. This committee decided that the contestants start at 11 o'clock in the morning and finish at 4. Each was to carry a paper on which the names of the women he called on were to be entered by some one who knew how to write or by making a mark.

Naturally the contest excited a great deal of attention, for it was known far and wide that the two suitors for Sarah Ann's hand were to contest for it by making calls on New Year's day. Each had his adherents, and there was a determination on the part of these persons to aid their favorite.

The rivals were started on opposite extremities of the field of operations. Each selected a friend who could write to attend him so that he might be sure all the calls he made were recorded. As the morning wore away, however, each had a train of followers that was constantly increasing. At 1 o'clock the bride to be sent out a friend to bring her a report as to how the affair stood. She learned to her satisfaction that Mose was seven calls ahead. At 3 o'clock—an hour before time would be called—she sent out another inquiry

Unreasonable Complaint.

The top floor tenant had a grievance. "The roof leaks," he said, "and if you can't do something to stop it"— "Leaks? Nonsense!" returned the landlord. "None of the people in the other flats say so."—New York Times.

Evading the Issue.

"Pa, Mrs. Gaddy asked me what your annual income was, and I evaded her question, as you told me." "What did you say?" "I told her I didn't think you had any other kind."—Baltimore American.

There Was a Reason.

Grubbs—I've told Jinks' cook has left him, but he seems perfectly cheerful. I can't understand it. Stubbs—That's because you never dined with Jinks while the late cook was on the job.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Breaking It Gently.

"Do you mean to say that your daughter hasn't told you she was engaged to me?" "Yes, I told her not to bother me with those affairs unless she intended to get married."—Boston Transcript.

What He Feared.

She—If mamma consents to our engagement we needn't bother about what papa says. He—I do hope the non-importance of the male member of the family is not an ingrained idea with you.—Exchange.

Pilot Whale.

The blackfish, the most gregarious and one of the largest members of the porpoise family, is sometimes called the pilot whale because it blindly follows a leader, and the herd can be driven almost like a flock of sheep.

Ability as a Spy.

A person who has done considerable secret service work in the English army says that ability to eat paper is an essential qualification in a spy. Fame and fortune await the general who first trains a goat to be a spy.

A Vivid Past.

Husband (telling of accident)—And as I thought I was drowning my past life came before me in one vivid flash. Wife—William, you never told me before that you had had that kind of a past.—New York Times.

Where It Falls.

"When you roll up to a man's place of business in a fine automobile I dare say it is comparatively easy to buy something from him on credit." "Well, a scheme like that might work in the case of jewelry, millinery, dry goods and clothing stores, but I've seen it fall to impress a dealer in gasoline."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Thales of Miletus.

The first scientific thinker was Thales of Miletus, born about 625 B. C. He was the first to attempt a logical solution of material phenomena without resorting to mythological representations. In other words, Thales was the first man, so far as we know, to try to find out the actual truth concerning the world we live in, its origin, constitution and destiny.

MANUAL LABOR.

No one can teach you anything worth learning but through manual labor. The very bread of life can only be got out of the chaff of it by rubbing it in your hands.—John Ruskin.

He Had Neither Patriotism Nor Romance

By OSCAR COX

A man with one eye covered by a patch, a long scar on his neck and helping himself with a cane hobbled toward a hamlet in Canada. Meeting another man on the road, he stopped him and said:

"I come from ze wars in la belle France."

"Oh, you do? Did you go out with one of our Canadian regiments or did you go over and enlist in the French army?"

"I enlist in ze —th Canadian Infantry. I am a Canadian, though I love France."

"There's more of you come back than me I'd about as leave be a steer turned into a Chicago packing house as go over there to be made pulp of."

"We fight for civilization, for ze benefit of posterity."

"Well, you're welcome to do so if you like. I'm not interested in posterity, myself, and I don't consider that I'm under any obligation to my great-grandchildren whatever."

The speaker was about to move on when the war-scarred veteran said:

"There is a girl in this town by the name of Mabel Shaw, I believe?"

"There was a girl by that name."

"Mon Dieu! She is not dead?"

"No; she's very much alive."

"I bring a message to her from her lover?"

"Oh, you do?"

"He and I fought together in another
