Washington County's campaign for good roads will continue through 1917, and if 1918 does as well on laterals there will be roads well worth while inside of twenty-four months.

President Wilson again addressed the Senate on the question of world peace, the first of the week, and that his ideas will make him noted of all the world goes without saying. Wilson will go down to history as the one man who strikes out boldly for peace. Of course, this will not suit the "big fellows" who profit by war, nor will it suit the belligerents in Europe. Wilson knows as well as any that the poor man does the fighting, while the financial interests and nobility sit back and rake in the results.

It is to be hoped that the legislature will not pass the millage bill for improvement of the state highways. Washington County would have to pay about $10,000 annually to keep up a part of the Rex-Tigard road, its total benefit. If a portion of it could be placed elsewhere it would not be objectionable.

The railway has appealed the case, and it will be heard early in February. Mr. Tongue was associated with Glen Metker, of St. Helens, in conduct of the case.

The Limousine Look.

Perhaps it is hypercritical of us. Riding in a limousine is a magnificent and awful thing, and how should any plain mortal be expected to endure it without amendment to his soul? Still, from our sidewalk, we do observe and protest. Can no human being, even though to the limousine born, learn to ride in a closed car and avoid the closed face, that blank, top lofty aloofness of expression so alien to normal American worry and cheerfulness?

The limousine look attacks any happy, laughing debutante or bank president the instant the door slams and they sink back in what is technically known in motorcar literature as "mild" drawing room on wheels." It comes on or off the face very much as do the detachable tops that convert an ordinary touring car of commerce into a miniature palace fit to stand before the blazing glory of an opera house with uniformed attendant handing in a very charming and expensive wife.—New York Tribune.

A Japanese Composing Room.

The most interesting department of a Japanese printing plant is the composing room. Great cases of type of all sizes extend the whole length of the mammoth room. As the Chinese and Japanese characters used in a printing office run far into the tens of thousands, the life of the compositor must be a continual search for the letter he desires to use.

The compositors were scuffling around the aisles of the room hunting for these characters and all singing at the tops of their voices, which apparently caused them to forget the terrors of their work. There seemed to be hundreds of them, and the din was deafening.

After the proof is finally corrected the forms are made up, quite as they are in an American newspaper office, stereotyped and sent down to big cylinder presses.—Archibald Bell in World Outlook.

Old Time Cutlery.

The earliest instance of admission to the freedom of the Cutlery company of London by apprenticeship is that of John, son of Samson the Kufsmith, who was apprenticed to Stephen att. Holt, cutler, in 1287. The Cutlery were divided into four main branches: the bladesmith or kufsmith made the blades, the bafter produced the handle or haft, the sheather the sheath, while the cutler put together the various parts and sold the tool or weapon complete. Closely allied to the craft were the laborious or furishers, who were common to the crafts of cutlery and armorers and were engaged in furnishing and refitting old armor, weapons and garments. Another subsidiary occupation was that of the grinder. The bladesmiths were divided into two branches, the kufsmiths and swordsmiths.—London Graphic.

Man With a Miscellaneous Past.

"We have been gradually growing accustomed, and especially of more recent years, to regard ourselves as a composite people—an amalgamation of several races and many nationalities," says the New Republic.
"To illustrate that, the writer is fond of quoting Herbert Croly's characterization of Mark Hanna's ancestry. After describing how 'in his father's blood there was a Scotch-Irish, a Welsh and an English or Dutch strain and on his mother's side a French Huguenot, an Irish and an English infusion,' Mr. Croly concludes: 'He became by virtue thereof a tolerably typical American, which means a man whose past is so miscellaneous that he is obliged to seek for himself some form of effective personal definition.'"

Quite Musical.

It may be so, and it may not, but a Los Angeles student affirms it in an examination paper, and here it is: "Beethoven discovered the sonata in four moves. Before this it was a sweet. He wrote many piano sonatas for the violin, and they were called string quartets. When a piano sonata was for an orchestra it was called a symphony. The ninth piano sonata he wrote for voices to sing."

Ambiguous.

When Billings was away from home on a long business trip he got a letter from his wife that still puzzles him. It ended thus: "Baby is well and lots brighter than she used to be. Hoping that you are the same, I remain, your loving wife."—Manchester Union.

How the Captain Tacked.

Captain Joshua Slocum, the famous solitary voyager, tells in his "Sailing Alone Around the World" an amusing story of the way in which he protected himself at night from marauding savages while in the neighborhood of Cape Horn. When he went to sleep Captain Slocum would sprinkle the deck with carpet tacks, taking particular care that not a few of them stood "business end" up. It is well known that one cannot step on a tack without saying something about it. A pretty good Christian would whistle; a savage will howl and claw the air. And that was just what happened. Slocum reports, about 12 o'clock one night. His vessel was boarded while he slept. But no sooner had they stepped on deck than the savages, howling like a pack of hounds, jumped pell-mell, some into their canoes and some into the sea, a great deal of free language escaping them as they went. Slocum says that he was never disturbed again, though he sprinkled his deck with tacks many nights thereafter.

Winks and Eye Gaths.

Every few seconds we wink both our eyelids at once, although not purposefully. If we stop winking our eyes become uncomfortable and gradually cease to work as they should. When the eye is open the front of it is exposed to dirt and dust and is apt to become so dry that a painful stinging sensation results or would do so if constant moisture were not provided to cleanse and soothe the tissues.

As a matter of fact, each time we wink we wash the eye, says the Popular Science Monthly. Up above each eye is a tiny bag called the tear gland, and all the time we are awake it makes tears. When the front of the eye feels itself becoming a little too dry or dusty a communication is sent for a supply of moisture. The eyelid then comes down with a tear inside it to wash clean the front of the eye. This is the most gentle and perfect washing in the world.

Safety of a Ship.

The safety of a ship depends upon its stability, strength, water tightness and reserve stability and floatability if injured. The strength is due to the framing and plating or planking. Water tightness is effected by calking the seams between plates and stunks. The seams of iron plates are calked by hammering the edge of the uppermost plates against the one underneath it. The seams between planks are partly filled with oakum, which is forced in and the remainder of the seams filled with pitch, marine glue or putty. The reserve stability and floatability when injured depend upon the position and volume of the interior space which is flooded. To reduce this volume to a safe point vessels are divided into compartments by water tight bulkheads, which extend across the ship at intervals.

Redwood and Fire.

Probably no other wood burns with more resistance than California redwood. It seems to have been made fire resistant by nature. In logging camps this is peculiarly noticeable, for no other wood could be so treated. Because of the enormous size of redwood trees the logs are very heavy—a six-foot log will weigh from thirty to fifty tons—and it is very difficult to handle them when the ground is littered with bark, undergrowth and tops. To get rid of this waste, or "slash," as the lumbermen call it, he simply sets it on fire. The slash burns off, but the logs do not burn. They come through this test by fire, which lasts from eight to ten hours, with merely a slight char on the sapwood on their exterior.

Wrinkled Prunes.

Personally we'd rather remain fat than to fall off suddenly and look wrinkly like a stewed prune.—Kansas City Star.

It is the unwashed prune that is wrinkly. Stewed prunes are plump. Where do you board?—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Burn it, the landlady assured us twice, very positively, that they had been stewed.—Kansas City Star.

Stewed twice, perhaps.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Not at All Plain.

"What is your husband's name, madam?" asked the polite directory canvasser.

"John Smith," responded the lady.

"Plain John Smith, eh?"

"No, indeed! John is the handsomest man in this town."—London Answers.

You Never Can Tell.

Crawford You spoke of opening a bank account in your wife's name in order to teach her the value of money. How did it turn out? Crabslaw—She used it up to pay a lot of bills I could have staved off for six months.—Exchange.

Shaming the Professor.

"You claim to be an expert in scientific research," sneered his wife.

"What of it, woman?"

"And yet every day I have to find your spectacles for you."—Exchange.

Not Safe.

"Shall I lend him $200?"

"I don't believe I would. He's one of those chaps that never lets anything worry him."—Detroit Free Press.

A Health Crank.

"Have you any nice coconuts?"

"Yes, mum. Here's one full of milk."

"But is it sterilized?"—Boston Transcript.

God be praised that I am overtaken with misfortune and not with sin.—Zadl.

Pride of a Musician.

Viotti, the famous French musician of the eighteenth century, had an equal contempt for royalty and an exaggerated opinion of himself, as the following story shows: One day he was summoned to Versailles to play before Marie Antoinette and the court. The performance had begun, the opening bars of his favorite solo commanded breathless attention, when a cry was heard: "Place for M. de la Comte d'Artois!" At the sound Viotti immediately ceased playing, cast an indignant glance at his audience, placed his violin under his arm and walked out of the place.
