

A NEW SAWMILL IS UNDER CONSTRUCTION

Located on Smith-Wall-Mahon Tract, North of Town

SAWS TO CUT 40,000 DAILY

New Enterprise May be Forerunner of Other Mills

Hillsboro is to have—is having—another sawmill. The Hannah-Matthews Co., of Yamhill Co., are at present establishing a camp on the Cornell tract, north of town, recently purchased by Messrs. Smith, Mahon & Wall, and they will soon have a mill running which will turn out 40,000 feet daily. Lumber is being delivered now for camp and mill construction, and the machinery will soon be here and the firm expects to be running in a few weeks. The plant will first cut off the merchantable timber on the tract, and then buy from the P. R. & N. The mill is to be located at the first big trestle on the P. R. & N. north of the city a mile.

It is possible that this is only the forerunner to a greater development of the possible mill-sites for Hillsboro, and it could be in the realm of the future that Hillsboro is to become a sawmill town. The rate from here south is just as cheap as it is from Portland south, and the rate in here from the Nehalem is cheaper than the Portland freight rate. This would give the sawmill its slabwood as salvage, and this alone is quite an important item. As Oregon and Washington are to have a big lumber export business during the war, and a large sale after the war, it would mean a big thing for this city to have two or three big mills in operation.

WRITES OF EUROPE'S PREMIER CITY, PARIS

Verne McKinney Tells of Wonderful Palaces and Magnificence

TELLS OF HUN AIR RAIDS

Still Works on Stars and Stripes, the A. E. F. Publication

Verne McKinney, son of Mrs. E. C. McKinney, of the Argus, in a letter dated June 30, writes the Editor of some of his experiences in Paris, Europe's premier city, where he is working in the Central Printing Plant. He says in part:

"Received a letter from Glen Taylor, who is working in a dental infirmary. He told me that some of the boys in Co.—had been lost. Well, it is to be expected. I only wish I were up there. But, 'C'est la guerre,' as the French say.

Went out to a ball game this afternoon, at Bois de Boulogne, and played around a little. Of course our team was beaten, and by a large score. Great crowds of French people are always interested spectators, and they crowd right into the diamond and nothing but being hit by a ball will move them. The fair sex form a large percentage of the spectators, and they will soon make good baseball fans.

Heinic came over three nights in succession this week, air raiding, and murdered about 15 innocent people, besides causing material damage. The artillery puts up a heavy barrage and it is hard for the Gothas to get through. It is very dangerous to be on the streets when the barrage is up, as you take a chance of getting beamed by a piece of shrapnel, which wouldn't be very pleasant. One should wear an "iron helmet" when venturing out on the street while the barrage is up. These raids are very annoying, as they come just about an hour after we get to bed, about 1 a. m., and of course the guard comes up and chases us down.

I have been visiting many places of interest and beauty lately. Last Sunday, in company with three other fellows from the plant, went to Versailles, where the allied war councils are held of which you read. The palace built by Louis XIV and XV is also there. The palace Versailles and grounds are something wonderful, and are at the end of the Boulevard de Paris—the widest in the world. This palace, it is said, cost $125,000,000, and it is no wonder that such extravagance caused the people to take Louis XIV and Marie Antionette and execute them. All of these beautiful places, however, make Paris the most wonderful city, and well worth fighting to save.

In the courtyard is a large statue of Louis XIV, who started the palace in 1601. We hired a guide and proceeded thru, first going up the marble stairway up which the Paris mob thronged after Louis XIV and Marie Antionette at the time of the French revolution. The rooms are of magnificent gilt work and the walls and ceilings are covered with marvelous paintings. Most of the furniture has been taken out from fear of air raids, but of what remains the upholstery is splendid, and just think, it has been there for probably two or more centuries. In the first room we entered there was a statue of Napoleon in his last moments at St. Helena. In the King's apartments the bed in which Louis XIV slept is still in place. The Gallery of Mirrors is a beautiful hall in which many notable events have taken place. It was here during the Franco-Prussian war that King William of Prussia was proclaimed Emperor of Germany. (He was the grandfather of the Kaiser, and it was a desecration to the room.)

Last Wednesday went to Garmont Palace, one of the largest moving picture houses in the world, and saw an official picture presented by the Signal Corps, entitled America's War Effort, and it was great. The American Cavalry Band was there to liven things up, and we were all given a great ovation by the French people. Some of the scenes were the recent fighting around Chateau Thierry. All of the American wounded who could get around were there, and some of these were in the fighting of the last German drive toward Paris, and saved the situation at Chateau Thierry. There were many noted men there, including Marchal Joffre, Gen. Bliss, ambassadors and other distinguished representatives of foreign countries. There will be a big entertainment at this place on the night of July 4, for the American wounded. Elsie Janis will feature here, and Marshal Joffre will give the boys a talk on the night of the 3rd.

Tomorrow I go back on the day shift, and out of the press-room. Am going to learn to operate a linotype. Have been on

F. E. Rowell, of Scholls, was in the city Tuesday. He had an auto load of potatoes and they were in a paper netting sack, as large as the usual gunne, but much more ventilative. They were the first of the kind seen by many here, and owing to the fact that vegetables would be slow in heating they should be winners. Rowell has used them for several years and says that while they are high in price he finds it economy in the long run to use them.

J. E. Hamlin, a nephew of J. E. Hamlin, held here and convicted of forgery when the late John Sewell was sheriff, went before the Vancouver war board the other day and related that he had given the officials there no notice since he registered in 1917, and was inducted into the army. It was to his father's house that Hamlin went when he broke from the Hillsboro jail, and there was where Hamlin received a bullet in his groin while being captured by Sheriff Biesecker, and then returned to Hillsboro.

E. has been working as book-keeper for the Columbia Engineering Co., of Linnnton, and before leaving, the company presented him with a wrist watch and shaving set, and his local K. of P. lodge presented him with a handsome ring, emblematic of the order. He is but 21 years of age, and is in the 1918 registration class. His Hillsboro friends wish him success.

the night shift for more than four long months, and it was getting rather tiresome. Am taking good care of myself and feeling fine."

DRAFT AGE RAISED AND ALSO LOWERED

Eighteen to Twenty, Inclusive; and Thirty-two to Forty-four

REGISTERING IS A BIG JOB

Oregon Will Furnish 100,000 Men Under the New Legislation

Congress has practically agreed on the new registration law for the selective draft, and this will mean that the United States is to have five million men in the field by next Spring. The new law makes the selective draft cover men 18 to 20, inclusive. (The 21 years already prepared for and passed) and from 32 to 44 years of age. Oregon will have perhaps 100,000 men in these two new classes, and it will require an immense amount of work by the registration boards.

The bill will be passed by Congress, as there is a big majority for the measure as it now stands, and it may apply to the strengthening of the Navy.

The law may be passed before recess, and may not, but in all likelihood it will be sent to the president before many days as the preliminary work must get well under way at once if the huge army is to be raised.

MARIA MAUZEY BEAGLE

Mrs. Maria Mauzey Beagle, widow of the late Wm. Beagle, one-time sheriff of Umatilla Co., died at Rutherford, Cal., Aug. 7, 1918. She was the daughter of the late Wm. and Eleanor Evans Manzey, and was born near West Union, this county, June 20, 1852. She was married to Wm. Beagle at the home place, Nov. 21, 1875. To them were born seven children, two of whom died in infancy. The following children survive—Grace Beagle Russell, of Portland; Faye Beagle Lewis, of San Francisco; Wm. Karl, Rutherford; and Raymond Beagle, George, another son, a member of the British Royal Medical Corps, two years at the front in the war, was invalided home and was killed a few months ago at Los Angeles, by a street car.

Of her immediate family she leaves the following sisters and brothers: Mrs. J. A. Imbrie, of Hillsboro; Mrs. Lucinda Smith, of Portland; Mrs. Lucinda Ballard, Washington, D. C., and Thomas Mauzey, of Juneau, Alaska.

Mrs. Imbrie and Mrs. Smith departed last night for Rutherford to attend the bedside, and were on their way when a telegram was received announcing the death.

FALLS FROM SILO

Chester Stewart, on the W. H. Bear place, near Tigard, sustained a fall last Saturday afternoon that came near costing him his life. A mason was building a silo on the farm and Stewart was taking some material up the ladder. When he reached the top of the silo, which was built up to a height of 37 feet, he reached the top and grasped a piece of tiling, which was not yet firmly set in the mortar, and it gave way, precipitating him to the ground. He fell on the old silage, which was littered over some boards, and sustained a broken arm, a broken pelvic bone, received some bad abrasions on his head, and had one eye badly damaged. A telephone call was put in to Portland and an ambulance hurried out to take him to a hospital where a Portland physician attended his injuries. He was unconscious until Monday morning, when he had a change for the better. He may not lose the sight of his eye, but it was a mighty close call. Chester is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Stewart, of this city, and is a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Schulerich. He will be laid up several months.
