At this time when young men of the calibre of Wm. Gottlieb pass to the unknowable home and community are not all that suffer, for the nation, as well, suffers a distinctive loss. It is to the strong arm and brain of young Americans that victory will come to a world democracy, and success for the preservation of human rights, and each man of Gottlieb's class—a king within himself—is an asset to the future of the world's hearthstones. There is, however, the consolation that the spirits of such young men today are hovering over the heads of those valiantly fighting to crush tyranny on Flanders fields and in the forests of La Belle France, while a grateful world applauds and hopes.

While Col. Roosevelt was not licensed or allowed to capture a brigade of Germans the Argus is on the job right now to predict that the valiant fighter will capture the command under General Hays, of Indiana, when he gets his army ready for action in the next campaign.

Perhaps, after all, there is one man who may be immune from attack by Gen. Roosevelt. Gen. Foch hasn't been called down by the great American strategist. This may come, however, as soon as T. R. gets his glasses off our president.

The hyphen is again coming into its own, American troops on the fighting line having fought hand-to-hand for 72 hours. And here is where the hyphen comes in. The bulk of the party were "German-Americans."

The Allies have shortened their lines by 50 miles by the last month's offensive. That they will shorten the route to Berlin within a year from date seems to be a foregone conclusion.

Senator Vardaman has been beaten down in Mississippi. Vardaman is a pacifist with the "if" knocked out of it.

After all, perhaps the Kaiser thinks Paris is a mighty poor place to eat dinner in, anyway.

Fred Engeldinger, who enlisted some time ago with the Medical Department of the Army, is home on a short furlough.

Miss Elizabeth Delsman, who has spent the last three years in Wisconsin and other Eastern states, returned home yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Wells left the last of the week for an auto trip to Camp Lewis and other places of interest in Washington.

Jos Cawse, of North Tualatin Plains, was in town the last of the week. Cawse has plowed up his hops and is no longer worrying about prices on the product.

Engineer Al Wagner, for many months on the Hillsboro-Timber gasoline motor, has gone to Salem to run a locomotive on the Fall City branch of the Southern Pacific.

Manager Phelps has secured "The Beast of Berlin" for a feature at the Liberty Theatre, and will soon announce the date of its appearance on the screen. This picture has created widespread interest.

Threshing of winter grain is pretty well finished, and the late grain is going to have hard sledding, as it is so poor a yield that the threshermen hate to tackle it. The gain for the work generally gets on the wrong side of the ledger.

Talk is still being repeated on the streets that the two railways here will be merged so far as local management is concerned, and that the S. P. will run over the O. E. tracks, up Washington, thus abandoning the Main Street passenger office.

J. W. Hughes, of above Forest Grove, was in the city Saturday. Accompanying him were Mrs. Mollie Hughes and son, Thomas Hughes, now with the United States Army, and his wife. The soldier has not been in Hillsboro since he was a boy, and he hardly knew the place.

Resolved, that a record be kept by the women's committees, showing the number of bonds sold and the amount thereof, and that said record when given to the men's committees in the cities, counties or states, be credited to the women's organizations in each city, county or state; and be it further

Resolved, that in all places where a daily record is posted during each drive indicating the number of bonds sold by the respective divisions of the men's organizations, a space be allotted on said bulletin board to the women's committee, and that the daily report sent to the women's chairman to the men's chairman, if received by 12 o'clock each day, shall be posted at the time the men's reports are posted and displayed on said bulletin board. And in all places where such daily reports are not posted, that the women chairman of the committee in each city, state or county send daily reports of the sales made by the women to the chairman of the men's committee in each city, county or state; that the chairman of the women's committees prior to the opening of each campaign, be furnished with all necessary supplies such as application blanks, receipt books, buttons, badges or any other insignia officially authorized by the Treasury Department at Washington or by the men's committees in each city, county or state; and be it further

Resolved, that where it is convenient or practicable, office space be provided for the use of the women's organizations, near by and convenient to the headquarters of the men's committee in each city, state or county with in the Twelfth Federal Reserve District.

ANOTHER CALL

The War Department has made a call for another entrainment of men for the four-day period beginning September 3. Washington County's proportion would be 90 men, and this will exhaust all the available Class One men of the 1917 registration that have been examined. The Portland papers are authority for the information, altho the local board is non-committal.

TILLAMOOK RANCH

Tillamook dairy ranch of 240 acres, 120 acres level bottom land; 8 young cows, 1 yearling and 1 calf; price $12,000, on terms. Address the owners, O'Neil & Livengood, Hemlock, Ore. 24-6

CAREFUL SELECTION PAYS

Heretofore when grain was sold little attention was paid to whether there was mixed varieties or whether the grain was absolutely clean and free from mixtures. It all brought about the same price. Conditions are now changed and the grain that is marketed free from variety mixtures and weeds, is at a premium.

The past few days grains have been marketed in Hillsboro, which because of mixtures with other varieties, for instance some red being mixed with white, has caused it to grade down at least one grade, and in some instances two grades; other cases are on record where the grain overweighed a pound and a half or two pounds per bushel, but because of slight mixture with oats and buck wheat there was a dockage of as high as 5 and 6 per cent. To avoid such losses grain should be carefully selected this fall with the view of having only one variety, and that the seed be plump and uniform throughout and free from injurious mixtures.

The earlier the seed be selected the better, because if delayed much of the better quality of grain may be disposed of.

County Agent.

STOCK MOLASSES

The many inquiries concerning the possibility of obtaining stock molasses this winter has led us to investigate the market as carefully as possible and from all reports there appears to be a shortage this year, and there is some doubt as to whether the demand can be supplied. On account of its unusual quality in rendering palatable feeds which otherwise would not be readily utilized, it was hoped that there would be a large amount on the market.

The scarcity is due somewhat to transportation facilities, it now being necessary to ship by rail from San Francisco, rather than by tank steamers from the Hawaiian Islands, as formerly practiced. The Food Administration has taken up the matter and is trying to arrange, through the dealers, to handle it in tank cars. If this is done it will be necessary for farmers to furnish containers so that a car may be unloaded in a short time. The car contains about 20 tons.

County Agricultural Agent.

Arlie Delsman and Leo Waters, of the W. F. Delsman home, rescued two horses out of McKay or Davis Creek, yesterday. The animals had attempted to cross the stream at a place where the bank was steep, and once in the water could not get out, as the bottom was miry. They might have perished if the boys had not arrived on the scene. Both the youngsters were wet to the neck, as a result of getting the animals on terra firma. The horses are now at the Delsman ranch, on West Garibaldi Avenue.

FAIR WARNING

Spreaders are sure to advance—all our prices will be cancelled on September 1. After that we don't know what we will pay. We know it will be quite an advance. Just common sense will tell us that. Here are the facts:

Years ago we sold spreaders to the farmers for $125. At that time wagons were worth $65. Now a wagon is $150 and a spreader is only $195. It is entirely within the range of common judgment to predict that spreaders will sell for $250 within a year. But you must place the order before September 1 to get the benefit of the low present price.

THE TRUTH ABOUT CANDY

THE STORY OF A CHOCOLATE CREAM

IS IT A FOOD OR IS IT A NON-ESSENTIAL LUXURY?

It depends entirely on what is in it and what the food value of the contents is.

In the first place, what is a chocolate cream made of?

The principal ingredients are: Cocoa, milk and sugar, which, mixed, make the chocolate. Milk, sugar and some corn syrup make up the filling.

Every one of these ingredients is a food product of highest worth.

No one questions their separate food values.

We all know that milk, cocoa and sugar, making chocolate, forms a wonderful food.

No one questions the food value of milk.

We all know that sugar is an essential food.

And when nuts are added to the chocolate creams, as is often done, another splendid food product is added.

Taken separately, each is high in food value. Naturally, combined into a delicious confection, they are equally high in food value.

All these ingredients are food products which the human system craves and demands. That is why the active man, woman and child likes this combination of these food products which we call "candy."

Because of the food value of candy, soldiers crave it. The food value of candy has been forever established through the necessities of this war. The soldier, after a hard day's work, needs candy. His system craves it. It fills a real want. Shipyard workers, loggers, men and women doing all kinds of heavy work, crave candy because it supplies the need for something sweet to supply bodily fuel. Growing children require the sugar in candy to supply them with carbohydrates. The childish craving for candy is becoming recognized as the young body's need for fuel—not as an abnormal appetite. The thing is not to deny them all candy—give candy rationally and normally, like you supply any other food.

In normal times the sugar industry uses only 8 per cent of the sugar used per capita in this country. Right now this amount has been cut squarely in two.
