Oregon has had summers—and summers. But this is one of the most peculiar of them all. With drought in May and June, and a cool July, with sprinkles galore in August, it has been the greatest freak warm season that we have ever experienced here. Old pioneers say they do not recall such a season in fifty years.

The Hillsboro National Bank on July 20 received word from the treasury department, Washington, D. C., that it has been designated as a special depository of public monies. Judge Geo. W. Stapleton, of Portland, Saturday decreed that a $14,000 mortgage which Delia Hodler had given her husband, Louis Hodler, was without value received and ordered the instrument cancelled. The wife complained that her husband had by misrepresentation secured her signature to the mortgage.

A well known authority on farming in the county the other day said: "This has been a bad year for grain and other crops, but I have noticed one thing that stands out prominently—the farmer who believes in and practices fertilizing has not suffered the poor yields that the man has who lets nature take all from the ground and puts nothing back. I can cite dozens of farmers who have made 30 bushels of winter wheat right in my community, where other farms, with just as good soil if fertilized, have threshed 15, 18 and 20 bushels. It pays to fertilize."
