LT. J. B. DINSMORE IN BEST HOSPITAL

Writes Letter Telling of Assignment and His Work

TELLS OF 580 PATIENTS

Being Brought In on One U. S. Hospital Train

Lt. J. B. Dinsmore, better known as Dr. Dinsmore, formerly of Orenco, wrote his wife, now of this city, under date of Aug. 26, from Base Hospital No. 20, Chatelet Guyon, France:

"A few lines to let you know I am all O. K. After 10 days now of all most continuous travel, much hard work and very little sleep and 'cats', I am at last detailed to the best base hospital in France. Wrote you last from Bourges, where we (two other lieutenants and a captain) were held over night, were on our way to the front above Paris. Were up there 3 days getting a hospital train of wounded. Landed here night before last with 580 of them in a real U. S. hospital train; that kind of a train in this country means a whole lot when put along side of the French and English little dinky cars.

"Two hours after reaching this place had them all classified and in bed ready for operation or dressing, as the case required. The train went back the same night, but we were detailed to stay here with this unit, as they came over here as a hospital unit for a 500 bed hospital but instead they are required to handle a 2,000 bed hospital, so you can imagine what they are up against when a loaded train gets in from the front after a drive.

"This hospital unit with the exception of five doctors, is made up entirely of University of Pennsylvania, 35 doctors all told, 65 nurses and 150 enlisted men. We have plenty of work. Chatelet Guyon is one of the noted French summer resorts, 240 miles south of Paris; a beautiful place, noted for its mineral springs. The buildings are simply large stone summer hotels four to six stories in height in sort of a cluster overlooking a little valley in which these springs are located.

"The U. S. army have taken over most of the larger hotels and equipped them for hospital use, and they sure make very fine army hospitals; electric lights, an unlimited supply of the finest kind of mountain water and the finest climate I judge, to be found in France. The medical officers are quartered in one of the smaller hotel buildings, and am sleeping in a real bed (hospital bed); with mattress, sheets, and a pillow, with hot and cold water in the room; eat in a regular dining room from real dishes on a white table cloth. Two months now, since I have had a chance at anything like it; am willing to camp right here for the duration of the war. Don't imagine I will have any such luck.

"Operative teams are sent to the front from the different base hospitals every now and then, especially when a drive is on. They go up and work three or four days and take back a train of the wounded like we did.

"I sent back four men to the front today who were wounded the first few days in July. The wounded men do fine and make very quick recoveries, but the gas cases are fierce. Can do nothing much for them; simply takes time and nature and lots of both. I have some 50 gas patients in my wards who have been here from four to eight weeks; will move them out to a convalescent camp this week; can't hold them here after they are out of danger; have to make room for men fresh from the front.

"Have some mighty big men connected with this unit, not only among the doctors but also among the $30 per month orderlies and stretcher bearers. The man who waits on the officers' dining room is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and one of the doctors told me he was worth more than a million dollars. A prominent lawyer of Philadelphia drives one of the hospital ambulances and carries patients. One of the men offered to make a bet of 1,000 francs (sounds like a pile, don't it, but it isn't) that actual fighting would be over by January 1. Hope he is right because you and I have a date on July 4, you know, and I don't want to miss it."
