PUNCH, PEP AND PURPOSE

Herbman's Lecture Will Be Big Feature of Chautauqua Week.

J. C. Herbman, who comes to Chautauqua as one of the principal lecturers of the week, will probably arouse more comment and stir more people to action than any man you have heard in many a day. His lecture will deal with a subject of tremendous importance in these reconstruction days: the duty of the individual and of the community to the country and to humanity at this critical time.

Herbman combines the fire and energy of a dozen men. He turns loose a machine gun fire on his audiences and every shot goes home. The earnestness of the man, the powerful control of his subject, the remarkable force of his expression, all combine to make his lecture on the fifth night one of the events of the week that no thinking citizen can afford to miss.

CELEBRATED ENTERTAINER AT CHAUTAUQUA

Bess Gearhart Morrison Comes on the Fourth Day.

Bess Gearhart Morrison, one of the country's greatest readers and entertainers, is to be at Chautauqua this year. She comes on Band Day, with two of the most thoroughly enjoyable programs of the week. Elias Day, an eminent Chicago critic, says: "Her work excels absolutely on the American platform."

From her "Little Things Out of McGuffey's," the classics of childhood, through a wide repertoire to the thrilling lines of Henry Van Dyke's "Home Coming" song, her readings bear three decisive characteristics: Fitness, charm and exaltation.

WANTED WAR FOR FINANCIAL GAIN

TRIBUNE EDITORIAL WRITER TESTIFIED PAPER THOUGHT INTERVENTION WOULD BE PROFITABLE.

NINTH WEEK OF FORD CASE

Famous Million Dollar Case Continues in Mt. Edsel Ford is Called—And by Newspapers.

Mt. Clemens, Mich.—Editors who directed the policy of The Chicago Tribune, and editorial writers who put that policy into printed words, were the witnesses produced by the defense during the ninth week of the Ford-Tribune $1,000,000 libel case.

Tiffany Blake, chief editorial writer of The Tribune, was one of the most interesting witnesses. Mr. Blake testified that he had deliberately permitted the characterization of Mr. Ford as an anarchist because it seemed to him to sum up Mr. Ford's activities. He testified at length, under cross-examination, concerning the attitude which his paper took in favor of war with Mexico but against war with Germany, and admitted that The Tribune had in mind the material benefits which would accrue to the United States in the event of intervention, and the fact that no such gains could be reaped from war with Germany.

Ford Was in the Way.

During the course of his testimony Mr. Blake characterized the utterances and the attitude of Mr. Ford as "notorious." Ford counsel took the stand that Mr. Ford's position could not have been notorious to readers of The Tribune because The Tribune never referred to the alleged statements which it is now using as a means of justifying its attack. Its attitude towards Mr. Ford, counsel attempted to show by questioning the witness, was based upon the fact that just when it seemed that the paper's long campaign for war with Mexico was about to bear fruit, and troops were being hurried to the border, it suddenly found Henry Ford in its way.

Submarine warfare, in the estimation of The Tribune, the witness said, was never sufficient cause for war. Mr. Blake admitted that the newspaper did not demand armed redress after the sinking of the Lusitania, and that when the President used the Sussex case as a test, The Tribune continued to declare that the submarine issue was no cause for war.

An editorial from The Tribune was introduced and Ford counsel proceeded to read from it, "If we win in Germany, what do we win?"

"Yes, what do we win," interjected the witness.

"Blessed if we know," continued the editorial.

"Yes, blessed if we know," broke in the witness again, "we don't know today."

"You stated," said Ford counsel, "that when the government finally decided on its position that you supported it and stopped argument against war with Germany. Do you consider that when the President had presented an ultimatum and broken off diplomatic relations that you were supporting him and the nation by continuing to tell the people that the President had no ground for war with Germany?"

"Yes, because the submarine issue was not a good ground for war."

"Well, when the President broadened the issue by telling the country that we must enter the war to make the world safe for democracy, did you argue for war on these broader grounds?"

"No, we did not."

Overlooked Ford's Offer.

"Did you know, Mr. Blake, that Mr. Ford was the first person in the United States to offer himself, his ability, his factories and all he had, to assist the government in the event of war—did you know that?"

"No, I did not know that."

"Your perusal of The Tribune did not give you that information about Mr. Ford?"

"No."

R. R. McCormick, president of The Tribune company, and one of the editors of the paper, was another witness. Mr. McCormick testified that The Standard Oil and International Harvester interests, in which Tribune stockholders have holdings, never in any way directed the policy of the paper towards Mexico. His testimony also touched the matter of salaries, which The Tribune cut off as soon as men entered the service of the nation in the great war, although it had continued salaries when its employees were called to the border. The fact that the army pay had been doubled, that married men were discharged from the guard and that conscription had been put in force, caused the paper to change its policies, Mr. McCormick stated.

E. G. Liebold, general secretary to Mr. Ford, and Edsel Ford, the president of the Ford Motor Company, were called to the witness stand by the Tribune late in the week. Mr. Liebold testified concerning a letter which he had written in response to a communication which sought to interest Mr. Ford in a device which would deal out death.
