

OVERWHELMING VOTE PARK IMPROVEMENT

Twenty Years Bonds Voted to Put Shute Park Into Shape

VOTE WAS NEARLY 3 TO 1

Charter Amendments Both Carry by Substantial Majorities

Hillsboro has taken a step forward—on Tuesday the bond issue to improve Shute Park with the proceeds of $15,000 worth of city bonds carried by an overwhelming vote, the final standing 222 to 79. Shute Park, a fifteen acre tract on the Tualatin Valley Highway, will now be improved and a pavilion will be erected permanent in nature and character. There were uneasy minutes over the possibility of defeat, for the opponents of the measure made considerable noise. Many voted against the bond issue because of taxation; many opposed it because of the fact that the pavilion may be used for a dance at celebrations or fetes, and some voted because they felt that too little of the money would be used in park improvement and too much in the pavilion, and so on. The opposition melted away to 79 by the time the count was made.

The bonds will be sold as soon as possible and work will start. It is high time that the beautiful tract had some financial attention, and bonding was the only avenue to get the money, for a budget appropriation could avail but a few hundred dollars on account of the six per cent. limitation under the state law.

The two amendments to the charter carried big. The vote for the amendment to permit the council to license, tax and regulate vehicles used for transportation of persons or passengers, goods, wares or merchandise, or other articles, into, out of, or thro, the city, was registered at 293 for to 131 against. The curfew ordinance amendment was carried by a vote of 367 to 57.

To return to the park bonds—the city has stood on its foot long enough and shows evidence of life. Shute Park is a beautiful tract. It was bought by the city for about $1600 in the days when property was at a discount. The city slept on its opportunity or it could have bought it a few months prior for $1500. Now that we have it, let us beautify it—and we will.
