NEW INDUSTRY IS OPEN FOR BUSINESS

Hillsboro Sash & Door Planing Mill on East Washington St.

TURN OUT FINE PRODUCT

Best Equipped Plant Ever Established in This Section of State

Without an effort of publicity or sounding of trumpets a new industry has been established in Hillsboro and is now running on orders—the Hillsboro Sash & Door Planing Mill, located on East Washington St., between Ninth and Tenth. The company is financed by Henry Steinke and his brother, Otto Steinke, and A. L. Chase, and eighteen big machines are installed in the Everfresh Building, which the company has under lease. All the machines are modern, are electrically driven, and a big dry kiln turns out the best Oregon lumber into the seasoned product after which it is driven through the big saws and planes. The kiln will turn out several thousand feet of lumber daily and a crew of from 9 to 12 men are putting on the floor the finest sash, doors, French doors, windows, window frames, cabinet work, cabinets, mouldings and interior finish material and everything in finishing lumbers.

The kiln is so constructed that several thousand feet of lumber can be laden on trucks and dried and then shot to the warehouse floor for the knives. Only the best of lumber is used and a visit to the plant is conclusive evidence that Oregon lumber is about as beautiful a thing as one could view after it has been given the finishing touches. Orders are coming in from Portland and the mill will have all it can do. Shipping facilities are good with a spur right at the plant on the Oregon Electric.

It is such an institution as has long been needed here, and the investment runs into thousands of dollars.

Henry Steinke is one of the well known builders of Hillsboro and his work is well known to all in that line. His brother is a finished carpenter as well. Mr. Chase is well known here, having resided here several years ago, later moving to Vancouver. His family will soon return to Hillsboro for residence.

Hillsboro is to be congratulated on getting so large an enterprise established and the firm's success is assured. With a building boom on locally the installation of the plant was almost a necessity and much money heretofore sent abroad will now remain at home.

CLUB TALKS PUBLIC ISSUES

Luncheon at Washington Hotel Monday Largely Attended

One of the liveliest meetings of the year was held by the Hillsboro Club at the weekly luncheon at the Washington Hotel, Monday afternoon, and the attendance was greater than it has been for some weeks. There was no chairman presiding, as none had been appointed, but this did not deter the gentlemen from taking up public issues and discussing them to the limit. M. H. Stevenson brought up the matter of keeping the city residence sections beautiful, and said that the water question was one of vital importance, as irrigation, and plenty of it, meant green lawns. Mayor Shute said that the restrictions on water made the keeping of lawns green a hardship, and contended that if one could irrigate daily that the trouble would be eliminated. Mr. Hare said the city had filed on a water right in the mountains and that as Forest Grove had made its water system pay, Hillsboro might install a system and make it pay, and that the $2,000 per year paid for fire service would go a long way toward helping out a municipal plant.

Mr. Easter said that the pipe line running down from Sain was too small to permit of the entire residence district using water at one and the same time, because this would mean no pressure with all faucets open. He said that the main was too small, and that it was not a matter of scarcity of water as the Sain Creek supply was large enough to supply the territory involved, and then some.

Mayor Shute stated that there was a possibility unless the water question was solved in the near future that Hillsboro, Cornelius and Beaverton, with North Plains and Orengo, would go in together and finance a system that would be efficient each and every day of the year.

Mayor Shute asked the club members and business men to come up to the council meetings and give the administrative body their support.

It developed that the placing of the toilets on the city park, next to the highway, was opposed by some under the impression that next to the highway was not the proper place. On the other hand some thought that this was the place, and with proper out-lines and care, there could be nothing unsightly about the perogolas.
