TO WATCH AND INSTRUCT

Article From County Nurse Tells of Official Duties

The general public is always desirous of knowing the "whys and wherefores," and justly so. The question "What Does the County Public Health Nurse Do?" is often asked. The County Public Health Nurse answers this query in full in the following:

"This is a question I have so often been asked that I want to give the public a short resume of the work of a County Public Health Nurse.

Everyone who has a child in school knows of the "school nurse"—well the school inspecting is one important branch of the work. There are many home calls to school children's parents, for various reasons. Some to explain the necessity of having Johnnie's defects attended to, others because "Mother wants to see the school nurse."

Then there is the child of the pre-school-age, especially those under three years, to be looked after. It is astonishing how few mothers understand or appreciate the value of good, plain food; plenty of fresh air and rest for children. Not to mention "Bringing baby up."

The expectant mother has always been glad to see and talk with the nurse. The nurse explains to her the wisdom of being under a physician's care, and helps her to get ready for the coming event.

It is one of the greatest satisfactions in a Public Health Nurse's life to see the look of relief on the family's face when she comes to give actual bedside care to one of their loved ones. While doing it she gradually instructs some capable member of the family in the care of the invalid. It is great to note the interest with which the younger members of the household watch the new baby getting its bath.

The Public Health Nurse visits those suffering from tuberculosis. Either active cases or those who have been exposed to it. She instructs the family how to care for the sick one and how to prevent others from taking the disease.

How about contagion? Here again the Public Health Nurse has her work to do. It is her duty to aid the Health Officer to prevent contagion, in any way she can. If you know of any filthy condition where flies and disease (which are inseparable) are rampant, tell the nurse about it and she in turn will get in touch with the Health Authorities. Don't forget the "other fellow" if you are suffering with a communicable disease.

Besides all these phases of the work, there could be much done in the way of expansion—Health Clubs, Home Nursing Classes, Little Mothers' Leagues, Clinics of various kinds, exhibits, etc.

So you see the County Public Health Nurse looks after the health of the community in various ways."

Mrs. Jessie Twentyman sues Robert Twentyman for divorce. They were married in Portland in 1905, and have no children, excepting an adopted daughter, Florence. The wife says that the husband is guilty of cruel and inhuman treatment in telling her that he had no love and affection for her and that he also was cut to the adopted daughter. She says that when company was present Robert sat in his chair, and, presumably, slept like twenty men. She asks for $75 per month alimony to care for self and the daughter. Te complaint alleges that Twentyman led a "desert life" prior to marriage, which in the language of Bret Harte, means that he owned or cared for a flock of "ban-baas," and, translated to the vernacular of Main Street, Hillsboro, means that he was a sheep owner or a sheepherder.
