BILL ZEIGLER HAS CHAPTER OF MISHAPS

Narrowly Escapes Blow-up of Auto Gasoline Tank

THEN TAKES WILD RIDE

Went so Fast Flame Couldn't Catch Him—Violated Speed

Bill Zeigler takes no stock in Fridays and "13ths" of the month, for he knows that bad luck comes on other days. Last Saturday Bill had two incidents that were thrilling, hair-raising and would have made good movie stunts—only you couldn't get Bill to pull of the stunts again for a million dollars.

Zeigler was in Brown's tinshop Saturday trying to blow-torch the top off of an auto gas tank. The tank had been rinsed out several times and hadn't been used since last Fall, when the gas shortage was on. At that time some one had put in an admixture of coal oil, chloroform and glycerine and the Lord knows what else—everything, probably that would make an explosion. Evidently some of the glycerine was in the center compartment, for, while Bill was working away along came Old Man Explosion. That tank went to the ceiling, all torn to bits. Zeigler was staggered back eight feet. Leonard Brown, working six feet away, caught Zeigler before he fell, for Bill was wabbling like a chicken that had been hit on the head by a small stone. Taking stock after Bill regained his senses he was found to have an injured nose and a split eyebrow, which Dr. Wiley patched in short order. Bill's first words after he came to himself were "Where in thunder would I have been had I been sitting on top of that tank?"

Lloyd Brown, working nine feet away, was given a good coat of dust, and he and Leonard and Zeigler are all wondering why there wasn't a first class funeral about Monday. It was some escape and some explosion, the detonation being heard a block away.

Bill then concluded he hadn't had enough to last the day so he went out on a motorcycle to test it out. When out a few blocks from home base the pesky thing caught fire and Bill realized that the faster he went the longer it would take that blaze to catch him. He drove to the shop and yelled for Harry Aldinger to bring out the extinguisher. It worked and Bill was soon out of danger—but he will never forget that streak of flame behind him. Bill took an inventory and then concluded it was an unlucky day—so he quit work and went home to make garden. Zeigler can get $5,000 from Mack Sennett if he will pull those two exhibitions in front of a camera.

A horse wanted: Sound and true, for general work on farm, for single work and in buggy, must weigh about 1200.—Walter Zuercher, Beaverton, R. 2, near Elmonica station. 11-13

SCHOLLS PROGRAM

Next Saturday evening is the big vocal recital at Scholls' Grange Hall, when the Ladies' Aid present Mitylene Fraker Stites, contralto, and Robert Stites, baritone, with Augusta Parker at the piano. The Ladies' Aid hopes for the usual good turn out and promises all patrons a real musical treat. Come and bring a friend and let us show these Portland artists that rural communities appreciate good things also.

Mrs. Stites has a rich contralto voice and she sings calmly and naturally, without strain or effort. This is as it should be and is the reward of a patient student who sacrifices and works and at last approaches the ideal. She spent four months last summer under the direction of Oscar Seagle, who is unquestionably one of the greatest authorities on voice placing in America. Since her return she has given public recitals and done other solo work which shows in a marked degree the benfits of Mr. Seagle's training. The Oregonian, of Dec. 10, 1920, says: "Her solos fairly won her right to be classed as one of the principal finely-trained cultured contraltos of the Pacific Northwest.

Mr. Stites, who appears on the program, has a splendid baritone voice and is always well received. During a three years' residence in Minneapolis, he was a member of the Apollo Club and baritone in St. Mark's Episcopal Church. He has appeared many times in solo work in some of the leading churches of Portland and is also a member of the Apollo Club of Portland.

PACIFIC U. HAS MAY DAYS PAGEANT

Miss Evelyn Patton Crowned as May Day Queen

HILLSBORO STUDENTS AID

Wonderful Depiction of Old Events on P. U. Campus

Over 3,000 people witnessed the coronation of Pacific University's May Queen, Evelyn I (Miss Evelyn Patton) by Arthur Jones, Student Body President, and the presentation of the pageant "The Progress of the Pilgrim Spirit."

The pageant was announced by two heralds adorned in scarlet robes. The Spirit of Religious Freedom rescues. Democracy from the tyranny of Autocracy, Pilgrims passed by waving farewell to their friends as they start upon their journey across the Atlantic. The compact is signed in the cabin of the Mayflower. As the Pilgrims land the Indians bring gifts to the Pilgrims at the time of the First Thanksgiving. The figure of Education, in blue cap and gown appears. The history of the progress of the nation was revealed, and also the founding of the nation. Then began the story of the westward trend and the crossing of the prairies, which included prairie schooners, men on horseback and afoot. The dramatic picture of the division at Champoeg stirred the audience as did the wonderful portrayal of the founding of Pacific University by Miss Ernestine Brown, attired in a gown once worn by Grandma Brown, who taught the first school on the campus. Singing of "Hail Old Pacific Hail" and "America" concluded the best May Day performance ever held on our campus.

This was followed by a baseball game on the diamond between Chemawa and P. U., which ended in a victory of 6 to 4 in favor of Pacific. Pacific has won 7 out of 8 games this season.

The festival concluded with "Rival by Request," a play given in a most successful manner by the Sophomores.

Miss Dorothy Linklater portrayed "Patriotism" in the pageant; Francis Linklater took the character of the "Spirit of Religious Freedom," and that of "Mr. Smythe," in the Soph play; Fred Dysle assisted in the successful management of the play; Ethel Johnson was one of the Pilgrims in the "Embarkation Scene" of the pageant. Great credit is due the young people of Hillsboro for the fine spirit they displayed in helping to make May Day such a grand triumph for Pacific University.—Cor.

Church of Chirst, corner Third and Baseline—10 a. m., Bible School, the contest with the Monmouth Church is a lively one; 11 a. m., Union Memorial service at the Methodist Church; 7:15 p. m., Junior and Intermediate Endeavor; 8 p. m., Special sermon, subject, "The Rich Man and Lazarus," or "The Two Beggars." Special music.—Len Fishback, Minister.

Mrs. R. H. Greer departed Saturday for a visit with her sister, Mrs. Rose Shearer, of Seattle. While there she assisted in complimenting her mother, Mrs. Hiatt, aged 82 years, at her birthday anniversary on Sunday, May 22. Before returning home, Mrs. Greer will make an extended visit with her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Will, at CleElum, Wn.

I. H. Maxwell, of above Mountaindale, was in town Tuesday. He says that hops are looking fine and thrifty. He is not training as many vines this season as formerly, on the theory—and justly so—that he will get a bigger and better hop and thus have a product that will sell any old place in the world's market.
