MILLS ARE WORKING IN DEAD OF WINTER

Outlook Bright for a Big Lumber Year in 1922

CHARLES S. KEITH WRITES

Takes Optimistic View of Coast Situation

Oregon sawmills are running all winter, and the outlook for 1922 is bright with a firm demand for coast lumber. Chas. S. Keith, a recent purchaser of Oregon timber, in the Lumber World Review, says:

"Therefore, to sum the situation up, with the shortage of supply equivalent to approximately 28 billion feet of production and stocks; with a demand for lumber which has this year been sufficiently great to absorb all production and half of the stocks; with the fact that money is working easier, bringing mortgages and bond issues into ready demand and consequently rendering funds available for building; with the fact that depletion is proceeding at a rate which new production cannot immediately equal, the situation clearly argues and indicates that the year 1922 will be a year which lumbermen may look forward to with no uncertainty, but with confidence. It should be a prosperous year and the beginning of several more to follow."

OUR SPINES

What does CHIROPRACTIC teach us about our Spines, and what has been the results of this method of treatment? A gentleman who subscribes himself as an honest investigator, gives us two and a half pages in "Leslie's" on Chiropractic, which might be called a splendid conception of clever sarcasm, and is forced to speak more truth than his personal opinion would apparently permit, under his quotation, "they say," and mentions what was termed in all the newspapers last summer as the "Babbling Baby," or the child who talked 219 hours without ceasing, and was restored by CHIROPRACTIC. If he knows that there was such a case he knows that it was true, without "they say" attached to it, just as thousands of other marvelous results obtained that our leading newspapers would not print. Truly, as the Leslie article quotes Dr. Pinkham, of the California Medical Board, "there is a CHIROPRACTIC WAVE sweeping the country," and has been increasing by leaps and bounds every one of its twenty-six years of existence; and had it not been efficient and obtained results in cases that resisted every other known method, it would have been dead long before this, for no mere Fad or method of treatment ever lasted that long that was a fake. CHIROPRACTIC invites investigation.
