Entered at the Post Office at Hillsboro, Oregon, as second class mail matter.

According to the newspaper reports of the court count of ballots in Portland, in the governorship contest, one precinct down there failed to give Oleott fourteen votes more than he was entitled and delivered Hall sixteen votes to which he was given. This was the first evidence of any violation of election laws and the count will be taken before the grand justice. The election officials may be able to explain how this discrepancy obtained, and it is possible there was no fraud intended. The canvass of votes so far show no material changes as to the final voted as returned.

The matter of an air patrol for Oregon's timber during the dry months should receive favorable attention next year. There is too much money tied up in Oregon timber to see it go to waste for the want of a useful air service.

It becomes more and more evident that small farming will come into its own in this section of the state. Berry culture gives the best returns, after all, in less years, as well as in less time.

The worth of the canner at Hillsboro has been well demonstrated by the thousands of dollars which that institution has expended for labor and fruit in the year of our Lord 1922.

Frank Dersham, of near Roy, was a city caller yesterday.

Lewis Powers was in from beyond Leisville yesterday afternoon.

Miss Marie Bersinger, of Portland, is the guest this week of Mrs. Wm. Nelson.

Miss Josephine Uppenkamp was a week-end guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Engeldinger, Portland.

Ira T. Mills, who "knows how" was in the city yesterday and brot in 170 mole and gopher scalps to Clerk Kuratli. Mills has probably caught more of these pests than any twenty people in the entire county.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mitchell and Mrs. J. Palmater joined the Hillsboro camping colony at Meacham the first of the week, for a short vacation. It is reported that the Hillsborites have named their recreation grounds "Doodle Camp."

Deputy Clerk Luce and Neil Jamison have returned from a two weeks' outing down in the Newport country. They had a big time and return to their duties refreshed like the proverbial green bay tree. Luce had the time of his life fishing for flounders and other tidewater denizens of the deep.

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Pranger and family, of Sixth Street, returned Monday evening from a few days motor trip to Tillamook and the various beaches. They report a fine time and "roughed it" while having the time of their lives.

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Rushlow and daughter, Mildred, and son, Jack, were Tillamook beach visitors the past week, returning Tuesday. L. J. says that the stretch of road between Willamina and Tillamook is in need of a speed cap, as there is some very reckless driving going on over there, particularly around the dangerous curves.

O. G. Bretz, of Forest Grove, was in the city yesterday. He has just returned from a trip to Crater Lake and the Coos county coast, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Opal Clark. Mr. Bretz visited with Russell Morgan at Coquille, and the two went out after clams and crabs together. He says Morgan is doing nicely in the law business at Coquille. The barometer fell yesterday and the sky was overcast with clouds all day. There were just a few drops of rain here and there in the Tualatin valley, and during last night a few sprinkles took place. Those who have grain in the shock, or in the cutting, are not overly anxious for rainfall, but the potato raisers in the hills could use a big precipitation just now.

Ernest Schaefer, of Bethany, was in town yesterday. He brot in a double dahlia, grown on a twin stalk, nicely Siamesed together, and the dual bloom was the largest ever seen in this section. If he could just propagate that particular growth of dahlia he would have a fortune made. He has grown them for eleven years, and thinks he knows something about that branch of horticulture.

F. S. Olsen, oldtime carrier on Hillsboro Route 4, now of the Bayview country, on the Alsea coast, was surprised one day last week to have as guests Ed Luce and Neil Jamison, who were wandering along the coast line, fishing with a line with three hooks attached to each. Fred housed and fed the wanderers and then put them to work in the hay harvest.

The S. Hyre ranch, at Newton, has a new variety of bean. It is of the stringless variety, and the vine and product are purple, but when cooked turn to a fine green. The pods grow to six and eight inches in length and they are fine for canning. The Ray-Maling cannery people will can a case of them to try them out. The Hyres have raised them for 14 years and they are called the "Hyre Wonder."

POULTRY CULLING

Poultrymen must realize that keeping a low producing hen or cull their flock either by trap nest or external characteristics. A hen's ability to produce poultry is indicated by her vigor, shape of body, temperament, color of skin, width of back, depth and pliability of abdomen, and time of year for molting. (Ex tension Bulletin 247, Suggestive Points in Culling the Poultry Flock, H. E. Cusby, tells the particulars.)

Culling for good layers begins with the selection of eggs for hatching; chicks are culled when first hatched, and again when transferred to brooder, whenever weak or runty chicks are discovered they are culled out; and pullets that are a few months later starting to lay than the average are discarded. Culling is a 365 day watching for unprofitable hens, but it pays.

Hens that are large and coarse and have small sunken eyes are big eaters, poor layers, and be long rightly to the beef class.

In yellow skinned breeds the same pigment that gives certain parts of the skin their yellow color also colors the yolk of the egg. As the hen starts laying this pigment breaks up and disappears. When she quits laying the color returns in the same order but more rapidly. Hence the presence or absence of color gives the skilled poultryman an indication of whether or not her hen is laying. Lack of color may be produced by sickness, or lack of yellow corn and green feed. Good judgment does not cull in color alone.

Since hens begin molting when they stop laying, the late molters are likely to be the best layers. The later the hen lays the greater has been her egg production and the later she molts. Poor layers will have more new wing primary feathers in July and August than the good layers.

Aphis and cabbage and kale plants are particularly bad this year in many parts of the county. Black leaf 40, diluted according to directions on the package, will clean them out when properly applied. A good soap suds rather than clear water will assist in spreading the solution, making it more effective and economical of labor and material.—C. Agent.

Conductor Beckett, running the past month out of Albany, who home the first of the week, returning South last evening. Like the majority of the railroad boys who have been running out of Hillsboro in the past, he would like to be back at the old terminal.

FAMILY DIDN'T COME

Judge Smith yesterday fined two Jew brothers, L. H. and Steve Kaptur, of Portland. L. H. was under arrest for driving a truck faster than the law allows and Steve came out to plead for his brother. Judge Smith was adamant, however, and imposed the fine. L. H. swore that he had no money and would lay the sentence out in jail, and told his brother to go to Portland and get the committed man's family and bring it out here "for Washington county to feed." "Put them on the street," he said, "and the county will have to take care of them." Officer Weckert, who made the arrest, happened to step outside and saw a car with only one license plate on it. He looked up the record and found it belonged to Steve, the brother, who was pleading so hard for the first offender. A second complaint was filed and Steve was fined $15. After much lamentation a check was drawn for both fines and no family was brot out for county support.

LATEST ON GOVERNOR

As a bit of political news, this morning's Oregonian hints that Chas. W. Hall is to run as an independent candidate for governor. The same paper gives Olecott a gain of about 30 votes as the result of the recent vote on. The Public Defense League still maintains that Hall was nominated and it is this claim that prompts the public to believe that Hall will be in the field for the honors next November.

A FOREST TRAGEDY

He left his camp-fire burning to see if the fire lookout would pick it up.

He did.

He thought this would be a good test to see if the district ranger was on the job.

He was.

He wondered if a fire would burn very fast in the dry forest.

It did.

He thought he could get away before the ranger could catch up with him.

He couldn't.

He thought he could bluff the judge at his trial.

He didn't.

He wondered if the judge would have the nerve to sentence him to jail.

He did.

We wonder if he will put out his camp-fire the next time he is in the forest?

He will.

—U. S. Forest Service.

Forty-nine people attended the gopher poisoning demonstration on the J. A. Hobbs' farm, west of Hillsboro, Tuesday. The meeting, arranged through the county agent's office, was in charge of A. W. Moore, of the U. S. Biological Survey. Mr. and Mrs. Hobbs served refreshments to the crowd at the close of the discussions. To Mr. Hobbs is due the credit for a successful meeting. Other meetings will be held to discuss this simple method of poisoning gophers with strychnine, alkaloid and green clover tops.—Co. Agent.
