The Hillsboro Argus, "Largest and best weekly paper in Oregon"-(notice that is quoted) is, besides, about the only weekly paper in Oregon going at $1.50 a year, the old price of the 70's and 80's when potatoes were exchangeable. But at that, the Hillsboro people are sure using the Argus, and it has a hard time getting all of the big ads in ten pages. The Argus is a good advertising medium, and the ads are making Hillsboro one of the best cities in the state. Thirty thousand people there during the Fourth celebrations,-

GREAT POSSIBILITIES

Hillsboro has had its first flower and tell her later on?" show. It was not large, it was not even representative, but it was very, very important because it was the beginning of an activity which has great possibilities. It was the planting of an idea, which if properly was a heavy Middle West blizzard, and cultivated, would grow to a startling for two days the city cowered under size and would attain state-wide stinging winds and cutting sleet. An outstanding example of what can be done with an idea is the Hollywood bowl. Its construction cost less than $100,000-it is now assessed at more than $1,000,000. Adjacent real estate values have risen proportionately. They produced beauty and wealth came. Can we do the same?

ANOTHER ANGLE

Much has already been said, and justly so, about the value of the Ray-Maling cannery to Hillsboro and the county; but we have heard nothing of what it means to folks in Cordova, Alaska, for instance. Did it ever occur to you that there are vast areas on this old ball where no fruit grows, whatever. Think then what it must mean to these people living in these regions, to open a can of delicious Oregon cherries.

What a service the local cannery is giving to people who have never even read about our fertile land. Another reason why you should give the local institution your undivided support, and conserve your fruit. # The Man WithThree Names

By HAROLD MACGRATH

The story of a man to whom fate had dealt marked cards and cheated abominably. then, apparently relenting, had given him a single chance to stack them in his own favor. How he took the chance, what he made of it and how strangely it all affected the lives of many others! That is the story which Mr. Mac Grath tells in his usual engaging manner.
