Chevrolet Car Retired After 46,150 Mile Test

A romance of the General Motors proving ground at Milford, Mich., has come to light with information just received from the Chevrolet factory by R. J. Higdon of the Higdon Motor company, the local dealer, that Chevrolet test car number 112 has been retired from service after withstanding the withering strain of 46,150 miles of driving on various types of road under a wide range of climatic conditions, all within the brief space of four and one-half months.

Number 112 has a standard light delivery panel body on the standard commercial car chassis and was taken out of regular production at the Flint plant. When in the course of routine it was replaced at the proving ground by another Chevrolet, it still had in it many miles of unused transportation, engineers declared, despite the grilling experience of so many thousand miles of terrific test driving.

TEMPTATION CAME—"the other man"—who promised all her heart yearned for, the glamor of cities, the lights and gaiety that appealed to her nature when—
