HILLSBORO PEOPLE RETURN FROM EAST

national forest of 700 or 800 square miles, with its grocery and trees and thousands of deer, was one of the wonders of the trip.

No Car Trouble

The speedometer registered 2500 miles at Salt Lake and from there they started east over the Victory highway. The Berthaub pass to the continental divide attained an elevation of 11,200 feet, but the car experienced no difficulty in making the grades, even with the heavy load of 5,300 pounds. It might be said here that car trouble was a minus quantity on the Wells' trip. When they returned home two of the tires still had Oregon air and all four had good old Oregon ozone at New York.

Indiana Fare Well

In Oklahoma the party saw more oil wells than they ever thought existed. The wells are in regular rows about 150 yards apart and extend as far as the eye can see in either direction. Mr. Wells brought out an interesting point in his narrative at this point. He said that the Osage Indians had been moved around from place to place to the benefit of the white man and finally were established on a reservation in Oklahoma. A few years after locating them there the white man struck oil, and the royalties to every man, woman and child in the reservation for the last quarter of three months amounted to $2,370.

Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and New Jersey were traversed before the Hillsboro tourists arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wells' son, Charles O. Wells, and family, at Towaco, N. J., where Charles O. is employed in the Bell laboratories. Mrs. Charles O. Wells was formerly Miss Geneva Jacobs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Jacobs of this city.

Historical places were visited in Delaware, Washington, D. C., Mt. Vernon, Gettysburg, and Frederick, where Barbara Fretchle waved the flag in the face of the Confederate soldiers.

The speedometer registered 5,000 miles at New York. Mr. Wells said it took them two hours to make ten blocks up Seventh avenue to leave New York in the dust and motor up the fair Hudson and across to Niagara Falls. They crossed the international boundary line into Ontario, Canada, and thence across this province into Michigan, where they visited the Packard factory at Detroit. They said that the Ford factory was hiring men to start the production of their new car. This was along about the middle of July.

In driving into Chicago from Michigan City, a distance of 75 miles, it is all city. They visited relatives in the Windy City, particularly a cousin, who is head of a large industrial concern there.

The next stop of any time was at Des Moines and Boone, Iowa. The Wells lived at Boone for many years, and they visited friends and relatives there. The start west from Boone was made August 5, just two months from the day they left Hillsboro.

Would Congratulate Cal

The Black Hills of South Dakota, where the president's summer White House is located, was on their itinerary. As the party passed the president's quarters, which are about 150 yards back from the highway, they observed Coolidge in his 10-gallon hat inspecting a new horse, that someone had given him. In the hopes that they might see Cal mount the horse, they tarried a few moments. The man who does "not choose to run for the presidency in 1928" disappointed them, however, and walked back to the porch of the lodge, where Mrs. Coolidge was waiting. Mr. Wells said they had neglected to send word ahead to the president that they were coming, and as a result the soldier guard in front prevented the local democratic war horse from congratulating Coolidge on his decision not to become a candidate.

The Hillsboro telephone chief, true to his vocation, noticed a dozen telephone circuits leading into the lodge, put there in order that the president might keep in touch with affairs of the nation.

More summer rains than usual have made favorable conditions in Wyoming and South Dakota. Mr. Wells said that he never saw so many fat herds in his life.

Catches Trout

In the Shoshone canyon they saw the Shoshone dam, which blocks a gorge 1000 feet deep and 400 feet wide. The dam is 330 feet high and forms a lake 25 miles long. This is near the eastern entrance to Yellowstone park, where they spent several days seeing the sights of that wonderland. The most interesting part of all was a catch of cut-throat trout by Mr. Wells, who would rather fish than eat. The geysers basin of the park comprises an area of 100 square miles, literally honeycombed with geysers and boiling springs of one kind or another.

The drive across Idaho was a revelation of the benefits of irrigation, according to Mr. Wells, who said that one is constantly reminded of the contrast of the desert without irrigation and the prolific country that results from irrigation.

The last stop was at Wallowa lake, which Mr. Wells says ranks high among the beautiful views on the trip. The Blue Mountains are worthy the name—Switzerland of America.

Wright Said to Be Wrong

David Wright, who has been working on the rock crusher at Scofield, was arrested last Thursday by Deputy Sheriff William Hathorn on a boozing charge. Officers say that Wright was wrong in this case, and said Deputy Hathorn two quarts of beer and a pint of wine. A dozen bottles of beer and a bottle of wine were taken at his place by the deputy.

The telephone is not only a convenience, it is a social and economic necessity, on the farm as well as in the city.
