Pilot Merrill in Thrilling Rescue

Russell Merrill, brother of L. J. Merrill, president of the Shute Savings bank, last week jumped into prominence again by his aeroplane rescue of Bessie Howe, government school teacher at the isolated native village of Ninilchie, 115 miles west of Anchorage on Cook inlet, Alaska.

Miss Howe accidentally shot herself while cleaning a rifle and a faint amateur radio signal of distress was received at Anchorage and Pilot Merrill with a doctor took a big chance and hopped off in a plane equipped with skis. Merrill planned to leave after the rescue to help in the search for a lost trapper.

Pilot Merrill has visited here with his brother and is well known among the business men, having addressed the chamber of commerce.
