THERE WAS A MAN
(Visit the Fair)
There was a man who fancied that by driving good and fast he'd get his car across the track before the train came past. He'd miss the engine by an inch. And make the train-hands sore. There was a man who fancied this—There isn't any more!

There was a man who fancied that our stuff was mere surmising. He'd get his business over the top without our advertising. He'd just keep mum and play along. And win at last somehow. There was a man who fancied that—He's out of business now!—Ex.

A conscientious father was chastising his son.
"And now, my boy," he said, "when he was through, 'tell me why I have punished you.'"
"That's it!" cried the boy, bursting with indignation, "first you pound the life out of me, and then you don't know what you've done it for!"

The permanent wave may be a fine thing for the women, but if some one would invent a permanent shave it would help a lot more.

Occurrence of One Case of Infantile Paralysis Should Be Matter of Much Concern to Community; Let's Stop It

"The occurrence of a single case of poliomyelitis or infantile paralysis as it is more often referred to, should be a matter of concern to the entire community," says Frederick D. Stricker, M. D., of the Oregon State Board of Health.

"The appearance of the first case in a community will give concern to the physicians and the local health officer. The appearance of several cases should be the occasion for greater community action. A single case may have been imported or gotten the infection from an outside source. Several cases in different families mean that the disease has gained a foothold and that in all probability the source of infection is in the community.

"It is difficult to prevent the spread of poliomyelitis due to the fact that this disease is transmitted chiefly by mild cases—cases which do not develop paralysis and which may indeed be so mild as to make it difficult for the physician to make a definite diagnosis. The disease may also be transmitted by healthy non-susceptible persons who have within a day or so been exposed to some probably unrecognized case.

"There are, however, certain procedures that should be followed whenever the disease appears in a community. They are as follows: "1. Avoid large gatherings. This applies especially to children. Children under sixteen should not attend theaters, go to large picnics or other places where there may be careless coughers or sneezers or where food is handled by hands that have not been washed just previously. Theaters are urged to take the initiative in refusing to sell tickets to children.

"2. Always cover the nose and mouth with a handkerchief when sneezing and coughing. The germs leave the body chiefly by way of the nose and mouth.

"3. Always wash the hands with soap and water before eating. They may have come in contact with articles soiled with the saliva of other persons.

"4. Keep flies away from food. The germs of the disease may leave the body by way of the intestinal tract and flies are great visitors of filth.

"5. Pasteurize or boil the milk.
"6. Whether or not the schools should be closed must be decided by local authorities, who will, no doubt, be guided by the advice of the local health officer or the formal recommendation of the local medical society. In general it may be said that, except in rural communities, where the school is the only place where close association of children is necessary, it is not advisable to close the schools. But where kept open, there should be efficient daily inspection service.

"The prevention of infantile paralysis means the avoidance of much unnecessary expense and worry; the prevention of much crippling of children and all that such means to the individual concerned and the state."

There are more than 148,000 physicians in the United States, not including osteopaths and others outside the regular fold. Dentists in the United States in 1925 by a Carnegie Foundation count, numbered 64,166.

There are in the United States over 1,000 woolen mills, with 39,000 looms and over 4,000,000 active spindles. The 1927 crop approximated 272,463 pounds, excluding pulled wool. This ranges from 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 pounds a year.
