Many Elements Have Helped the Fair

The Washington county fair is our own institution and we should take pride in the progress made in a relatively short time. True, it has needed a coaxing hand and the co-operation of every section of the county, backed up by the pockets of Hillsboro business men.

The impetus that such an affair gives to boys' and girls' club work, if nothing else, makes the effort more than worth while, and this newspaper is of the opinion that every citizen should give it his or her hearty support. It feels that the fair is important to the county and to Hillsboro and that what helps the county helps us all individually.

The quality and character of the people who have acted as officials—on the board, as managers, or as division heads—have been largely instrumental in making it an event that all of us want to see continued and to become greater each succeeding year.

The present grounds are probably small, but without question the City of Hillsboro will co-operate to give a greater use of the Shute park and it will be possible to secure other nearby property to make a real setting and background for one of the best county fairs in the state. This will give the county and fair board what they want at a much less cost than any other place that they might secure and the location with regard to center of population cannot be surpassed.

Class Leaders Are Selected at Hill

A meeting of the senior class of Hillsboro union high was held Friday, September 14, for the election of officers. Officers elected were John Hare, president; Leonard Rae, vice-president; William Freeman, secretary; Oliver Williams, treasurer; Esther Perkins, reporter; and Hugh Rogers, sergeant-at-arms.

Clara Buff is president of the junior class and the other heads are: Charles Blazer, vice-president; Irene Heintz, secretary-treasurer; Anna May Wells, reporter, and Mrs. Miller, advisor.

Two Large Estates Filed in Probate

The estate of Mrs. Nellie S. Barnes, valued at $20,000, has been admitted to probate. The heirs are as follows: Leslie S. Barnes and Mrs. Mabel McLeod, Beaverton; Ernest W. Barnes, Willamina; and Mrs. Beryl Steen, Milton.

The Mrs. Polly Anne Rogers estate, valued at $10,000, has been filed in probate court. She died at Greenburg, September 3. The widower and three children survive as follows: Harry W. Rogers and Mrs. Lucy Lavina Curtis, Greenburg, and Araminta Reissman, Wisconsin.

First Chamber Forum Is Pep Meet for Fair

The board had been generous in appropriation for amusement. Representative Charles R. LaFollett, one of the division heads, said he believed the horticultural and agricultural exhibit this year would be better than in previous years. Other speakers were A. Bryant and Mrs. W. W. Phillips.

Likes People Here
W. K. Thompson, who became interested in this county by Hillsboro chamber of commerce publicity, was present at the luncheon and said the publicity resulted in his moving to a farm near Hillsboro, that he believes in the future of the county and that the graciousness of the people is pleasing to a newcomer from the east.

Dr. E. B. Lockhart expressed his appreciation of the people of Hillsboro and the friendly spirit that exists here. He said he hoped that he might be returned here.

President Jack Murton of the Hillsboro Cornucopians announced that three members would act as a reception committee at the luncheon and asked support of all members of the chamber of commerce.

Charles Fryal, Sr., illuminating engineer with the Portland Electric Power company, will speak on window and interior illumination for business houses. Ralph Easter, local division manager, will be chairman.

The chairmen of all chamber of commerce committees will meet with the board of directors next Monday night at 7:30 to go over plans and activities for the year. The suggestion questionnaire will also receive the once-over.

Wants Patriotism Back in Fashion

It is about time that patriotism began to come back into fashion, that it began to be a respectable, decent, wholesome thing to have. Patriotism is not to be confused with jingoism, which is hateful, or with imperialism, which is filled with menace, whether it be territorial imperialism, industrial imperialism or financial imperialism.

Patriotism is a decent and proper regard for country and it is incomplete without a constant desire to improve one's country, to make it better and freer and nobler. These things are consistent with a patriotism which refuses to berate and demean and condemn country at every turn. It is consistent with a refusal to take the ravings of every sick brain that comes along at their face value.

The pacifist, anti-patriotic propaganda has been puffed up, polished up, set up and braced up by every subversive force in the country. It is about time for a return to sanity, to decency, to democratic thought and a fair and sane regard for country. It is right to hold that this is a good country and proper to want to help make it a better country. It is right to be a patriotic American citizen. — Oregon Labor Press.

An outstanding vaudeville program, free to the public, will be on each night. A semi-old-time dance will follow the free vaudeville to-night and there will be dancing every night. An unusual fireworks display will be started at 8:45 Saturday night.

A free rodeo performance will be held in the Athletic park every afternoon at 1:30. There have been many entries in the first annual kennel show and dog fanciers are enthusiastic over the possibilities of this part of the show.

The boys' and girls' club exhibits indicate careful work and splendid instruction on the part of the leaders. The Grange booths are artistically arranged, together with the many displays in the industrial section. Every division of the fair has exhibits that put this county to the front.

Hillsboro business houses will be closed Friday afternoon for Hillsboro-forest Grove day and in the evening the Daffy-Dils of Forest Grove and the Cornucopians of the county seat will aid in the program. The local greeters' club members are wearing black berbies as the winter headgear.

Mr. Weather Man is looking favorably on the activities at the fair and three days of the same kind of weather should make for a good attendance.

"My dear Milman," Malet said, "if you are blaming Nita for falling in love, you are making the first absurd remark I have ever heard to drop from your lips. Love comes unsought, unexpected, often in its beginnings unwanted. I tell you I saw the whole thing. She held back; she tried to avoid him, but the circumstances were such that she could not. There were dances and tennis parties, riding expeditions and golf. Nita could not run away. She was, as you remark, there for a definite purpose.

"I'm immeasurably sorry you had to tell me this," said Peter Milman. "Why?" Malet demanded. "Because it infuses an element of bitterness in what was wholly a mood of victory. I am sorry for them both, but it is not possible that you with your artist's sensitiveness have put this in too vivid a light?"

"If anything, I've understated it," Malet could see that Peter Milman was genuinely disturbed. "Let me put it another way. Is it not possible that you, with your ready sympathy, have imagined the temporary infatuation that is so often seen in house parties to be a grande passion, something epic, as was the love of Dante for Beatrice Portinari?"

"Milman," said Malet slowly, "if I could believe you were right, I should be perfectly happy. But I saw them together. I spoke to each of them when they had said goodbye. No, it was the real thing. They will never completely recover. Nita has slain her own happiness because of the loyalty she thinks she owes to us."

"Thanks," Milman repeated. "Is there any doubt about that? Was it lightly, do you suppose, that I stooped to what we have done? I have never deluded myself about it. We have done what men of honor do not attempt. What punishment Raxon deserves it not ours to administer. After I have forced him to pay, I shall never be quite the clear man I was. I shall be something a little less. I knew this very well before I invited you to join me. You must not expect me to be swayed by anything now."

"Do you think I am trying to swerve you, as you call it?" "For what other purpose have you told me this? You have said, in so many words, that if we do as we have planned we are breaking Nita's heart."

"You will be," Malet asserted, "but you'll never know it from her. That's what she defines loyalty." "Have you forgotten what your life has been of late and to whom you owe all your unhappiness?"

"I am past fifty," Malet answered, "and what is left of my life seems very small and unimportant when I compare it with the happiness that is owed Nita." "By comparison I see myself in a very poor light," Milman answered. "But there is Barnes to think of, and Bradney."

Malet sighed. "It was too big a thing to expect. I had to tell you what your victory meant to Nita. I was going to appeal to the others, but you have refused, it will not be of much use."

Peter Milman paced up and down the room. What Malet had said made him unhappy. Chivalrous by nature, just, and not embittered by what life had brought him, he was confronted with a situation unparalleled in his career. He remembered noticing that Nita was dressed, unlike her usual, joyful self. She had drooped like a tall lily. Now he knew why. And, knowing it, the task of disciplining Raxon lost its savor.
