

At the Churches

Trinity Lutheran Church
German service next Sunday at 10:30 a. m. Sunday school at 9:45. The Thanksgiving service will also be conducted in the morning at 10:30. In choosing the morning hour, the congregation has sought to follow the custom and practice of those sturdy Christians who set this day aside for the purpose of returning thanks. It is also in accordance with the wish of our Chief Magistrate that we guard the old landmarks and first serve God on the day that has been dedicated to Him. Welcome.
Hillsboro Congregational Church
The bible school meets at 10 a. m. under the leadership of Floyd Miller. Public worship at 11 a. m. H. A. Deck preaching. Sermon topic, "What Religion Has to Do With It."

"Splinters"
There once was a man not unique Who imagined himself quite a shique, But the girls didn't fall For the fellow at all— For he made but twenty a wique.
The Pool-Gardner Lbr. Co. is "unique" as a lumber store, a "shique" in number of satisfied customers, because it doesn't take all "dique" to get action on your orders. Our two trucks insure dependable service and our large stock of lumber, building materials, hardware and paint guarantee satisfactory dealing.
The activities of the 4-H club work were instructively and pleasingly set forth at the chamber of commerce luncheon Monday noon by O. M. Plummer. We also learned that 4-H is a lucky four-leaf clover the leaves of which are named Head, Heart, Hands and Health.
Fuller Radio program Wednesday morning at 11:10 was a continuation of the "gift" talks. The Pool-Gardner Lbr. Co. is the Hillsboro dealer for W. P. Fuller & Co.
The Toggery Rack for the inside of a closet door is the newest fixture for the modern home; also the sink wings that can be attached to any sink opening. Come in and see these two modern conveniences.
W. M. Hurst has bought two acres in the Mahon tract and is building a small house and other buildings. He finds Pool-Gardner Lbr. Co. prices and material profitable.
Upon Tile Board, a nationally advertised wall board, is filling a bathroom and kitchen tile need. It is easily applied and cheap in price. Order it at Pool-Gardner Lbr. Co. Telephone 2691.

County Courts and the Recall

What legislation, if any, is needed to strengthen the hands of the county commissioners and county judges in the performance of their duty in order that exercise of their best judgment will not tend to immediately expose them to recall? Should county judges, where the separation has not been effected, be relieved of their probate duties in order that they may have more time to devote to detailed administration of the county business?

Is the volume of county business, particularly in those counties where road construction requires constant supervision, increasing at such a rate that efficient supervision thereof by the judge and commissioners is becoming more and more difficult, thereby increasing opportunities for negligence, oversight and lax accounting for funds?

And a final question: Is a full time county manager, a trained executive, employed by the county court and responsible to it for administration of its policies, a rational solution of the problem of county management?

We are prompted to ask these questions by the recall of Judge J. T. Adkisson, Wasco county, the defeat of Judge R. H. Mast, Coos county, and the biennial shake-up in Klamath county, preceded this year, as usual, by a reconfirmatory campaign. No brief is held for Judges Adkisson and Mast, for good reasons, not visible at this distance, must have existed in those communities for their recall and defeat else the opposition would not have been successful. Newspaper reports indicate, however, that passion and feeling growing out of bitterly contested controversy, entered into these election campaigns. And we note expressions of local editorial confidence in both judges, indicating that factional jealousies and community strife may have been a compelling factor in displacing from office experienced men whose knowledge of intricacies of county administration cannot be immediately replaced. Certainly Judge Adkisson's work in obtaining state cooperation on and local tax support for the Dalles-California highway, and Judge Mast's aggressive representation of Coos county on highway and market road matters, are evidences of a capacity that county electors saw fit to sacrifice.

In Klamath county, one commissioner resigned early this year rather than submit longer to community heckling and "loss of friends." While in the general election campaign a former Klamath Falls editor returned to the city to wage a strenuous campaign against one commissioner who was a candidate for re-election.

Admitting that there may have been serious mistakes in judgment committed by these gentlemen, isn't something wrong with our present system of county management when reputable, capable citizens who are sufficiently generous with their time to be willing to fill such thankless offices, are elected one year and recalled soon afterwards by the same people who elected them originally?

Such treatment of public servants, in the absence of charges other than local disagreement with judges' official acts performed to the best of their ability, can only result in lowering the quality of county government. If laws regulating county administration are so inflexible as to permit of no exercise of a judge's sense of business judgment and discretion, either some of our laws should be changed or the form of county administration altered.

Constant recall threats hanging over the head of county commissioners and judges, to their discredit and to the impairment of their service, are negative and not positive methods of approaching the problem of securing efficient and competent county government.
