POLICE SEEKING MILES

Cornelius Man Released from Jail Through Policeman's Error

Where is C. M. Miles? Portland police would like to know. Miles was arrested on city and state charges of failure to report an accident and recklessness as results of an accident ten days ago, in which Miles' automobile collided with one operated by Dr. Herbert A. Judson, staff physician of Emanuel hospital. Dr. Judson was seriously injured and has been in critical condition at St. Vincent's hospital since then.

Miles was held in the county jail until he put up $800 property bond, and a jailer asked Sergeant Ingle of the police traffic division if Miles was to be held further. Ingle found that a warrant for Miles had been canceled and told the jailer to release Miles. Immediately after Miles disappeared Ingle found that another warrant for Miles was on file. But it was too late. Now the city of Portland must wait until Miles returns to Portland from his home at Cornelius, Oregon, before he can be rearrested.—Oregonian.

Plan Spring Planting Needs

Late fall is the time of year to start figuring on next spring's plant growing supplies. Plant boxes can be made during the winter so one will not have to bother with them during the spring rush. It is better to make them of definite dimensions so they will fit bench or bed in the greenhouse or frame. A plant box three inches in depth is ordinarily the best. Other supplies to be considered include soil, dry, rotted manure, and some sandy loam for lightening the soil mixture. It is a good idea to keep these under cover if possible so they will be of good texture when needed. Further details of this work can be obtained from the department of vegetable gardening of Oregon State college.

In view of the scarcity of manure for heating the old fashioned manure hot bed, various ways have been considered in the past few years to use substitute fuel. Some firms are now manufacturing special small heaters which burn wood or coal to heat frames. The flue hot bed is cheap and practical and with
