Weaver constructed an inclined plane over which the seed was run in a thin stream. The mustard seed, being round, moved faster than the alfalfa. Two narrow bins at the bottom of the plane caught the seed. Mr. Weaver considers the method an entire success and by several runs on this apparatus expects to remove all mustard seed and thus reclaim some valuable ladak seed otherwise lost. County Agent Has Many Callers Dallas—A total of 3,765 calls were made at the county agent's office during the past year by the people of Polk county for assistance and advice in their agricultural problems, an average of more than 300 a month, according to the annual report filed by J. R. Beck, county agent, with the central extension office. In addition, Mr. Beck visited 746 farms during the year.

BAKER—R. N. Daniel of Haines

BAKER—R. N. Daniel of Haines, who last year made a gross income of $84 an acre from his 10-acre alsike clover seed crop, this year is planting 42 acres of his 80-acre tract to seed crops. He will have eight acres of Ladak alfalfa, eight acres of red clover, eight acres meadow fescue, 15 acres alsike clover and three acres of meadow foxtail. Mr. Daniel's success last year has also stimulated the interest of other farmers of this district in seed crops, reports County Agent P. T. Fortner.

FORD MEN'S SCHOOL

Ford service men of this city have recently undergone extensive schooling in the service department of the Ford Motor Company's Portland branch, H. L. MacKenzie, local dealer, reports. The scene below shows the complete room in which the equipment for their information is kept, while the car above is one of thirty-two Ford trucks throughout the country which contact the outlying centers of Ford territories carrying a "school on wheels" to service men. Inside the truck is as complete as possible an assortment of the equipment seen in the service division of the Ford Motor Company, under the direction in the service division of the Ford Motor Company, under the direction of Charles Ratcliffe, service department.
