Good Leadership

H. L. MacKenzie has been elected president, P. L. Patterson, vice-president, and Alf O. Johnson, treasurer, of the chamber of commerce. They are conscientious and vigorous young men and should furnish good leadership for the local civic organization. Morris Weil and L. J. Rushlow have been re-elected to the board and have proven themselves in past efforts as has C. T. Richardson, holdover member of the board. The retiring officers, Lester Ireland, M. P. Cady and L. J. Merrill, have given valuable service to the community and their work is thoroughly appreciated.

Acts Quickly

A few years ago the flood stricken south was refused $25,000,000 for relief and it had to be handled by private contribution. America has a humanitarian leader now, however, who sensed the situation that would exist in the middle west due to the most severe drought in 40 years, and, before he was called upon, urged steps for the relief of these stricken people. In this he demonstrates that he is a president for all the people.

Fathers will be honored throughout the country Sunday, June 17, which is set aside each year that we may pay our respects to dear old dad. Dad is usually a patient, unassuming fellow, who labors day after day to provide the necessities for the family. Perhaps he is sometimes taken too much for granted, but always the old dependable on whom the rest can fall back on in a pinch.

Lost $500

Six months delay cost H. N. Van Vleet, Rockford, Ill., a total of $500, according to his own report. He had apparently spent that much for relief of stomach suffering before he heard of Uga. Today for the first time in five years he can eat anything. He now gives credit for his recovery to the Uga Treatment, based on a famous stomach specialist's triple-action prescription. Its purpose is to neutralize excess acid, soothe and heal the inflamed stomach lining and stop pain. Already 54,169 letters praising the Uga Treatment have been received from victims of stomach aches, stomach indigestion, heartburn, gas pains, belching and other symptoms of gastric acidity. Write Uga, Suite C, Food-Science Bldg., St. Paul, Minn., for a free sample. The 7-day trial guarantees satisfaction on a money-back guarantee of satisfaction by Hillsboro Pharmacy Ad.

Great Humanitarian

President Roosevelt in a message to congress again demonstrates that he is a great humanitarian, having the interest of the common people at heart and a desire to do everything possible to create a more abundant life for them. Decent homes, productive work and safeguards against misfortune were pointed to as needs of the American people.

Such a desire deserves public approval and the support of American citizens without regard to politics as is pointed out consistently in many normally republican newspapers, who see in "new deal" policies good steps for improving the lot of the entire people.

Steps as outlined by the president such as unemployment insurance and old age pensions for action of the next congress should make for a greater lasting comfort and happiness for all American citizens. As pointed out by the president they are rehabilitation measures that must go hand in hand with national recovery. It is an ideal that the country can justly work toward. Safeguards must be provided against the sufferings of our people, there being little excuse for such conditions in a land of such great wealth.

The humanness of our president is clearly shown in a few quotations from his message:

"Among our objectives I place the security of the men, women and children of the nation first."
"But in addition to these immediate tasks of relief and recovery we have properly, necessarily and with overwhelming approval determined to safeguard these tasks by rebuilding many of the structures of our economic life and of reorganizing it in order to prevent a recurrence of collapse."

"These three great objectives—the security of the home, the security of livelihood, and the security of social insurance are, it seems to me, a minimum of the promise that we can offer to the American people. They constitute a right which belongs to every individual, and every family willing to work. They are the essential fulfillment of measures already taken toward relief, recovery and reconstruction."

"We have sought to put forward the rule of fair play in finance and industry."
"We must dedicate ourselves anew to a recovery of the old and sacred possessive rights for which mankind has consistently struggled—homes, livelihood and individual security. The road to these values is the way to progress. Neither you nor I will rest content until we have done our utmost to move further on that road."

Johnson Clarifies

New Policy on NRA

To clarify NRA's new policy Hugh S. Johnson Saturday issued a statement saying "While it is our hope that industries under approved codes may desire to agree to changes, the policy order does not affect them and will not unless they so desire. The adjustment has been worked out in negotiations with the interested code authorities."

"In no event will there be any imposed change in an approved code of ethics or in the conditions in that industry," the statement said.
"It should be clearly understood that all of the provisions of approved codes, including their price provisions, are in full force and effect and must be complied with."

Johnson's statement today specifically mentioned a group of industries as not being affected. Those he enumerated were: "All retail traders, including automotive dealers, bituminous coal, all lumber and timber products and all materials, electrical, rubber tires, paper industries, graphic arts and printing, bus, trucking and transport, and textiles, radio and all durable goods industries."
He said this list was not complete but was given because most of the "misunderstanding" had been reported from these industries.

Good Price on

Hay Expected

Hay growers to the number of nearly 30 decided Wednesday evening, at meetings in Hillsboro and Veerfort, that the outlook for a fair price for the 1934 hay crop is more favorable than many think. Figures submitted by the growers indicated that the carry-over of old hay on the farms is less than usual. While the new crop is heavy, it is not abnormally large.

Growers present agreed, reports County Agent Cyrus, that under existing circumstances, farmers need not be too anxious to unload their hay at low prices at this time. Market conditions at present do not warrant a high price, but the growers agreed that a fair price should be demanded. For number one red clover, they agreed to ask $10 per ton baled in the field with $1 more if it is stored in the barn. For vetch and oat hay they agreed upon a price of $11 per ton in the field.

Eastern Oregon, it was reported, does not have as large a crop as usual. While there may be some hay to be shipped from certain sections east of the mountains, there are other sections there that have no hay and are going to require some. Conditions would indicate that probably the greater part of the eastern Oregon crop will be consumed in eastern Oregon. It was said livestock in drought stricken areas are going to have some feed. Where this feed will come from no one at the present time is able to say. Another favorable possibility is some betterment in butterfat prices which might indicate a later demand for Willamette valley hay. Growers expressed themselves as believing that the supply of hay on hand with 1934 crop will be more than would be readily moved and cleaned up in the course of a normal winter.

HAND-MADE EARLY DAY FLAG EXHIBITED HERE

One of the oldest and one of the first flags flown in Oregon if not the oldest and first, is exhibited in the "Flag Day" window display in the Argus. The flag was made by a group of pioneer women who came to Oregon in the early 1850s and settled in the city. It flew over the court house at Oregon City during the period of the Civil war. It then became the property of Mrs. William Dierdorf (Mary Anna Ainsworth), one of the women who made it. It now belongs to Mrs. Emma Dierdorf, widow of the son of Mrs. Mary A. Dierdorf.
