Hops Shattered. High hopes were raised Saturday with the announcement that peace agreements had been signed that would end the waterfront strike that is tying up the entire Pacific coast, causing loss of untold millions and effecting everyone.

May Joe Carson of Portland in answer to pleas from many sections and countless individuals is determined to open the Port of Portland so that the losses to farmers and business in general will not be so great. It is a serious condition and every possible effort should be made to bring about peace so that the public will not continue to bear the brunt of the burden.

That the strike has had a marked influence on business is indicated by the June issue of the Business Survey, published in Portland, showing Portland business index at 60 for May of a computed normal, against 80 in April and 61 in May, 1933. Industrial activity has been curtailed due to inability to make shipments. Lumber stocks glut mill yards. Men are thrown out of work. Markets are permanently endangered.

The public suffers in all such cases. The people have a right to protection from such conditions.

Figures Talk. Rate of confidence in the Roosevelt policies has increased with a new total of 534,804 "Yes" ballots as against 340,569 "No" votes, according to the Literary Digest poll. Of 21,230 bankers, 11,275 oppose new deal to date in special vote. Some of the states that have shown the strongest popular vote for Roosevelt show the strongest banker majorities against the new deal. This vote shows a percentage of increase over the popular vote received by him in 1932. There is little to console big business critics and others in such figures.

Homecoming. "Happy Days" celebration in Hillsboro is always an enjoyable homecoming event and this year promises to be no exception. Much needed improvement of the Shute park has been undertaken under SERA and the grounds should be in a good condition for the annual gathering and celebration. Meeting of old friends makes the celebration worthwhile for many persons.

Honors Won. Masonic grand lodge has accorded two distinctive honors to local members of the order. R. Frank Peters has been advanced to grand senior warden and Jack Murton has been named deputy district grand master. The honors are deserved in each case. Mr. Peters is a loyal worker in every organization to which he belongs and is highly respected by these groups.

Not a Bad Idea. State grange approves the recommendation of Master Ray Gill for the abolishment of the lower house of the state legislature. There would be considerable logic in such action and it is a subject that merits study and consideration by the people of Oregon. It would simplify the lawmaking machinery and make for economy. Such action would also to a certain extent shorten our lengthy ballot to which few voters ever give much study.

Good Insurance. NRA justifies its organization, if for nothing else, in the elimination of child labor, and the riddance of sweat shop and pauper wage practices that existed in many places in the industrial east. Thousands of merchants with their many more thousands of employes hoping for better jobs resent influences that seek to thwart their hopes. The average small business man, regardless of party, is nearly every line of endeavor has seen in the NRA protection from price-cutters and chiselers, big and little. The blue eagle is their hope and the ray of sunshine for countless thousands of working people, whose incomes a year ago had been reduced to little or nothing and business failures were occurring regularly.

Hopes Shattered. High hopes were raised Saturday with the announcement that peace agreements had been signed that would end the waterfront strike that is tying up the entire Pacific coast, causing loss of untold millions and effecting everyone. These were quickly dashed with an overwhelming vote against the arrangement agreed to by the president of the longshoremen's union.

What Other Editors Say. The Train of 1844. Funeral services were held Sunday at Yamhill, Or., for Mrs. Alvira Perkins Russell, last survivor of the wagon train of 1844, who died Friday at Forest Grove, Mrs. Russell was only a year and a half old when she crossed the plains and had no direct memories of the journey to recount to her descendants; yet as the last living member of that migration of 1400 persons, she was a symbol of the noble and forgotten past.

Koeber's orchestra, composed of local boys, received considerable praise for their work at the musical show at the Hillsboro Grange recently. Such work deserves consideration from local people in selecting music of this nature. Along this line Hillsboro has had some mighty good bands in the past. There is lots of talent here now, and there is no reason why a good band could not be formed.

Men on the relief roll at Vancouver, Wash., refuse relief work for cash on grounds that state is obliged to take care of them anyway. The public is in the fullest sympathy with efforts to provide aid for unfortunate people out of work in this time of emergency, but tactics of this kind are likely to result in stiff regulations, providing work or no relief for those that are able to work.

Group Opens Study Portable Kitchen. (Continued from page 1) families were made self-supporting as a result of the canning program last summer. Four counties Marion, Linn, Clatsop and Clackamas, are now operating portable canneries, according to Mrs. Hamilton. She declared that surplus products were exchanged in various quantities with the canneries that the clients of the cannery could then trade their surplus for other commodities at the county commissary. This procedure permits a balanced ration for families in counties using the plan.
