Clean-Up Needed

If we were poetically inclined we might write a rhapsody on the beauty of Hillsboro with its lovely gardens and fields of "Queen Anne's Lace," but as we are just common business people we wonder just why the citizens haven't enough pride in the looks of their home place to cut the wild carrot (Queen Anne's Lace) which is taking the town? Few business people take time to see their home town as an out-sider would see it, and they certainly receive an eye-opener if they undertake to show the town to visitors.

If all home-owners or renters would keep the weeds mowed on their lots and parkings, whether or not they could afford to irrigate the lawns during the dry season, what a wonderful improvement it would be. Never for years has the writer seen it look worse than it does now. Lots and parkings near the heart of the town are a disgrace, running riot with weeds. The union high school, one of our show places, is surrounded with a good crop of weeds.

Just why is this pronounced lethargy? Are we so well satisfied with our surroundings that we can't see the defects, or are we falling into sleeping sickness? Wake up and grab a scythe—or give the Boy Scouts a job. As it is just now, a well-kept place looks like an oasis in a desert.

We have clean-up days in the spring—why not one in the summer?

What Other Editors Say

On the Job

At times under special guard to protect property and workers alike the San Francisco newspapers upheld all the high tenets of American journalism by never flinching during the general strike. Not a newspaper missed an issue and always the citizens in the strike-stricken area knew instantly what was going on.

In any crisis the American newspaper immediately gets on the side of sound government. No matter what its losses may be at the time, it always comes out. The strike has reduced advertising line and it has increased operating cost. The newspapers do not complain. That is part of the game.

The only publication in San Francisco that failed to come out was the San Francisco Shopping News. It shut down when the general strike began. It is a commercial venture designed to get and print advertising. The minute there was trouble it faded out of the field and let the public shift for themselves the best they could. When business resumes it no doubt is prepared to reappear.

Even the radio ailed the public during the strike, abandoning many of its best programs. It put out false rumors that had to be denied at the newspaper offices and frightened the public needlessly with its hysterical reports. Not only did the newspapers carry the news of the strike, but by their editorial opinions they helped to save San Francisco and California.

In times of stress the citizens always place their faith and trust in their daily newspaper. No reputable journal has yet betrayed that trust. The American newspaper can be depended upon always. That is more than can be said of some of the substitutes that pretend to be newspapers but run and hide every time a little trouble springs up—Sacramento (Calif.) Union.

Too Sensible

The public will stand plenty. Some public, the Russian or Italian public, for instance, will stand more than others. But there is a limit.

In educated America, fortunately the limit is lower than in most countries. Alarmists see communist parades and radical demonstrations of various kinds and immediately rush about crying the country is falling apart.

Unrest, strikes and disorders in various parts of the United States at present make great newspaper copy. Most front pages are covered with stories of these disturbances.

But the public has yet to speak. Radicals make more noise. They talk fast and loud. They are spectacular from necessity; otherwise, they would never be heard.

People who are not sure of themselves often have the most to say and the most advice to hand out, and are the most insistent about it. Solid, conservative individuals as a rule pay little attention to this type of person. When he gets too troublesome, they simply brush him aside as a mosquito and go on about their business.

No sensible group, as the American majority, speaks very often. It doesn't have to. It is sure of itself. This country will not fall apart in our lifetime. It is too well educated. You meet all kinds of sensible people every day.—The Redmond Spokesman.

"The New Deal under President Roosevelt despite opposition to certain aspects, has grown stronger as recovery has gotten under way. Pointed out, we assert that at no time since the depression began have the evidences of improvement been so unmistakable or the prospects so good. The Roosevelt administration has brought it about. We are with them in this, partisan politics aside.—Cumberland, Md., News (Rep.)

If a picnic means a few sandwiches, pickles, a cake and some fruit—you've a lot to learn! Of course you may and will prepare a number of your own. If you come, but the real thrill is to cook out in the open. However, if you really don't care for this type of cookery, there are still many delicious dishes that may be prepared in advance and packed in large thermos jars to emerge, piping hot on the beach or in some cozy grove.

If you'd really enjoy an open camp fire try preparing a casserole of scalloped potatoes at home. Pack them in a jar for a hot layer and comes to a boil but pours from the pot a hot topaz stream. You won't need a dessert with a meal like this unless you're very hungry. It needn't be fresh fruit will suffice.

For the more tender-foot type of picnicker there are a number of dishes such as baked beans that may be carried in thermos jugs. Here is a recipe for baked beans that will satisfy the most voracious out-door appetite.
