

Tigard Eleven in First Test

Tigers to Play St. Mary's at Huber on Friday

(By Curtis Tizard)
TIGARD First test of the season for the Tigard high school football team will be Friday afternoon when the locals meet St. Mary's of Huber on the latter's field. No continuation of the strength of Tigard's team can be made as they have not had a previous contest. St. Mary's should find it hard to get through the game as the line is heavy and experienced. The backfield combination has not been definitely settled but Goldhammer will probably be the ball carrier with the quarter back in the passer, will probably see action in most of the games this season. Tigard will miss the elusive Mogkett and the hard hitting Kosnik.

Building Active

Considerable rebuilding of homes and houses is being done around this vicinity with J. E. Smith in charge of the garage building. William Ariss' new home is nearly completed and Fred Olson is doing the interior work. C. Johnson has purchased a five-acre tract near the city and is planning on getting a new chicken house. Small acreages are moving in this vicinity.

Attend College

Colleges are calling local students and practically every college in Oregon will find Tigard students there. Several who have graduated from high school a number of years ago are planning on entering college this year. At the smaller colleges are getting the most of the students but a number are entering Oregon State this year. Lawrence Nummenkamp, Tigard basketball ace, is planning on going to Pacific university along with several others. George Rankin, Douglas Leedy, Ben Beckham, Charles and Jerome Fluke will continue at OSC. Pacific college at Newberg, Willamette and University of Oregon will have Tigard students.

Mrs. Nora Austin of Nevada City, Cal., visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Daniels. She stopped off en route to the east coast by the way of the Canadian Rockies. She will visit in Boston and New York before returning to her home via the southern route.

Tigard Girl Marries

At a quiet home wedding with only relatives and intimate friends present, Miss Hazel Hollingsworth, daughter of Mrs. T. Hollingsworth of Tigard, became the bride of Earl Shealy, son of Mrs. Shealy of Portland, Saturday evening. The bride was in white and carried a bouquet of balsam roses. Miss Lucille Hollingsworth, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Arthur Shealy, brother of the groom, acted as best man. After a short wedding trip the young couple will make their home in Portland.

Odd Fellows Gather

Over 200 Odd Fellows, Rebekahs and friends attended the "Double Six" meeting at Tigard I. O. O. F. temple Friday evening. Eight different lodges were represented with a large number of non-members present. Newberg had the largest visiting delegation with 25 followed by 14 from Beaverton. Local members were 50. Visitation was declared that the program was one of the best that was ever given at the social gathering of the lodges in this district. A gypsy number went over big and called for a second appearance of the tribe after the regular program was over. The address of welcome was made by C. E. Tizard, oldest in membership in the Tigard lodge and the response was made by S. E. Watkins, Newberg, instigator of the "Double Six". Woodrow Hill played a baritone solo and Kathleen Ramsby gave several readings. A novelty song and acting was done by local members. Clara, Mrs. J. J. Jones, played violin solo accompanied by Gladys Beyers, Past Grand Master. L. Carter gave a short address. Dancing followed the program and refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Worth, who have been visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Thomas for several weeks, have left for their home in Gettysburg. S. D. Mr. Worth is a brother of Mrs. Thomas and they haven't seen one another for 23 years.

Applications for Loans from the Tualatin Valley Federal Savings and Loan of Tigard were acted upon Monday night by the board of directors, according to J. O. Johnson, association attorney. Locals are being urged to investigate the saving and loan shares so that the association will be able to make loans. A number of applications are in the association's hands.

Tigard Lions club is again meeting regularly Monday nights at the local headquarters. A program is held every meeting night with some speaker of note at the meeting. Parkrose Lions were visitors at the Monday meeting. The address on the Tigard and Beaverton highways in August which was made at the request of the traffic committee of the club, showed that over 3,000 cars traveled on Sunday in comparison to 3,000 on Beaverton.

P. T. A. Seeks Members

Tigard P. T. A. is holding on a membership drive from September 10 to 27, according to Mrs. William Allingham, vice-president and publicity chairman. Parents are being urged to join the organization and help promote student welfare. The Parent-Teachers met Monday afternoon for their first meeting with 37 present. E. E. Neidy gave the address of the afternoon. Teachers and committee members were introduced. Projects for the coming year were discussed.

There must be plenty of deer in the woods this year according to the reports being brought back by hunters and most of the minkrods are getting a kill. In a party given by the hunters, a buck, a doe and a doe in comparison to last year when the party only sighted a couple. Other local hunters are reported to have had success.

Enrollment Large

Tigard grade school opened with a heavier enrollment than ever with 100 and a number of new families have children in school. Maurice Adams is teaching in the place of Mrs. N. Kurtti and will have charge of assembly. The first assembly was held Wednesday with a program.

ARE you looking for a house frock which will fit well, give you that neat, fresh appearance, be comfortable and—with all these qualifications—still be easy to make? Or are you interested in a clever frock or coat? Which ever you're seeking, pattern 132 offers you a charming house dress, in gray printed cotton, if you prefer. Linen or percale is suggested, too, as suitable material.

It is available in nine sizes: 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52 and 54. Size 46 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35-inch material with short sleeves, or 4 3/4 yards with long sleeves. Contrasting collar, vestee, cuffs and pocket facings require 3/4 yard, 35 inches wide.

A coat that enables you to face comfortably the brisk winds of early fall is that illustrated as Pattern 133. In light wool, it is designed in sizes 14 to 29 and 32 to 42. Size 18 calls for 3 1/2 yards of 64-inch fabric, plus 3 3/4 yards of 35-inch lining.

Stylish, indeed, is the printed crepe depicted as Pattern 132. It is designed in sizes 14 to 29 and 32 to 42. Size 18 in monochrome needs 4 1/4 yards of 39-inch material, or 3 3/4 yards for the dress plus 3/4 yard for the fur collar and sleeve bands in contrast.

"Have you met Roy Griffin's friend, Neal Conrad?" "I see him. I know about him. That's a smart young man."

"I met him at the dance in Hantsford last night. He's invited me to go to the mountains with him and Roy and Mrs. Griffin in his horseless carriage. And he said he might call tonight."

Blinded with contrition, with gratitude, with joy. "I've just been asking Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain," she said blandly, "whether they would have any collections with the Griffins and me tomorrow—provided, of course, that you would like to go. You've been kind enough to give their consent. Would it be convenient if I came for you about nine?" "Yes," said Anne.

"She could not, to save her life," he said another word. She stood still watching the others as they swarmed about him, while he cranked the car and climbed into the high seat. Then she went back to the parlor and George. There was one piece of cake left, and a little lukewarm lemonade at the bottom of the pitcher, swimming above undissolved sugar and a few seeds.

"I guess I am a little hungry and thirsty after all," she said gaily. "I'm going to finish these myself, if you don't mind."

They were gone. Anne fed George with the lemonade and cake, and sat dumbly beside him, only shaking her head when he urged her to join him, listening intently for the return of the motor.

It was at last. Everyone was laughing, and Neal was coming up the scrubby walk with a small boy hanging on either hand. At the rickety gate he paused. Anne could see and hear him plainly.

"No, I don't think I better come in," he said. "I might as well, just a short way. An' don't drive too fast. It would put me all of a tremble of ye should."

They were gone. Anne fed George with the lemonade and cake, and sat dumbly beside him, only shaking her head when he urged her to join him, listening intently for the return of the motor.

"Suppose we ask her." "Suddenly Anne saw it all—the fact, the skill, the kindness with which Neal had managed everything. And she had doubted him—Oh, how stupid, how wicked she had been! She went towards him,

NEAL hadn't noticed the clothes on which she had squandered her savings. He hadn't said a word about their trip, or even made a definite reference to coming the next evening. Nothing had gone right. She buried her head in her limp and lumpy pillow, and sighed her woes. And so she fell asleep.

She awoke restlessly, and consequently hopeful. Probably he would come again, and this time everything would be alright. She glanced out her dress, put sweet peas in the parlor, baked and frosted an extra cake, made lemonade. Again the fates were against her. Neal appeared, as she had hoped, and was cordially welcomed—by Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain, Sol and Sam. But George had arrived before him, and had taken possession of the parlor and of Anne.

She escaped, of course, long enough to greet Neal. But for a second time he declined her invitation to come in.

"Mr. Hildreth would never forgive me," he said laughingly, "and I'm sure the boys want another ride. This time I shan't take no for an answer from your father and mother either. Do come, Mrs. Chamberlain."

Neal's mother, who had been torn between her fear that he might not be invited, and her hope that he would, rose with assumed reluctance.

"Wal, ef yer so dead set on it," she puffed, "I might as well, jest a short way. An' don't drive too fast. It would put me all of a tremble of ye should."

They were gone. Anne fed George with the lemonade and cake, and sat dumbly beside him, only shaking her head when he urged her to join him, listening intently for the return of the motor.

EVERY WORTHY LIFE DESERVES AN EVER-LASTING MONUMENT. To all the generations of posterity the Memorial is a lesson in respect, devotion and honor. To them, it is the teacher of life's ideals, its achievements, and its examples. The memorial is the one perpetual history of life. Without it, a life's record often passes entirely, for the unmarked grave too soon becomes the unknown, unvisited one. OREGON MONUMENT WORKS. H. H. Stannard, Mgr. Hillsboro, Oregon
