Senators Cast Light on Munitions Industry, Believed "Arch-Foe of Peace"

IN the investigation of the armament industry, to determine the extent of its profits and anti-peace propaganda, the Senate Munitions Committee has made distinct headway.

The enormous revenues possible in the arms trade during wartime were spotlighted during one session attended by four members of the du Pont family, which controls the $620,000,000 E. I. du Pont de Nemours powder firm.

This company, it was revealed, rolled up a business of $1,245,000,000 during the war, paying $17,000,000 in bonuses to its officers. During this period, incidentally, the du Pont company was shown to have objected to a government munitions tax.

Senator Gerald Nye of North Dakota, committee chairman, is determined to see the probe completed. "Profits must be removed from war," declared Nye, who hopes to expose U. S. munition men's activities in lobbying, bribing government officials, spreading American Japanese war propaganda, promoting South American wars, and profiting in deals with the army and navy.

It was charged that British shells killed British troops in the Gallipoli campaign; that French guns mowed down French troops in the World War; and that German soldiers were killed by German ammunition sold during the war.

Here is another startling allegation that hinted the vast power of the arms merchants. During the war, the French army did not bombard the Briey basin where embattled Germany got its steel. This, even though the basin was in easy range of enemy shells many times, and its destruction, it has been claimed, would have shortened the war by two years — BEFORE A SINGLE AMERICAN LIFE HAD BEEN WASTED.

But French armament makers had decreed that the property of business brethren across the lines was to remain unharmed. The Germans retaliated by refusing to bomb French munitions properties.

Despite widespread knowledge of its pro-war, profiteering activities, the European munitions ring prospers. Its members are said to control government, bank, vast industries, great newspapers. . . in short, to constitute a powerful, constant threat against world peace.

BEFORE the World War, European "death salesman" broadcast the patriotic boast that it was their material which enabled their respective nations to defend themselves against possible enemies.

But post-war revelations stripped from them this defense, showing that they sold weapons of mass murder with great impartiality.

It was charged that British

IT'S SUCH FUN TO BE HEALTHY

And So Easy, Too!

And, oh, how good!

We eat bread and butter to satisfy that after-school empty feeling. Mother lets us have just as many slices as we want. We'd rather have a sandwich made out of Schoen's Bread even than candy, because it tastes so good and is good for us at the same time.

Perfection products make the school lunch just a little better.
