Help the Firemen

Fire Prevention Week, October 7 to 13, will be observed in Hillsboro in a bigger way than ever before. The ravages of fire take heavy toll throughout our country, and everything that can be done to make people more careful and to do everything possible in co-operation with fire prevention efforts is justified.

We should also stop to consider the fine work of our local volunteer firemen, who are on call day or night to prevent fire losses in our own city and surrounding community. They do an excellent work and the people of Hillsboro owe them a sincere debt of gratitude. It doesn't make any difference where they are or what they are doing they must answer the call of the fire siren.

People of Hillsboro and surrounding community should do everything possible to co-operate with the fire boys to make their work as easy as possible. Keep out of their way and by all means give them a chance before driving your car toward the blaze. Motorists by terms of an ordinance are required to draw into the curb when the siren is sounded and at the approach of fire apparatus. Be sure that you do!

Glen Powers

The effects of war service linger on through the years to the sorrow of family and comrades. Glen W. Powers succumbed Tuesday, nearly 16 years after the signing of the armistice, to the ravages of a disease, which apparently had its beginning during the war. Mr. Powers was one of Hillsboro's prominent world war veterans and one of its most promising young business men. He was active in the community for several years and was always ready to do his share, and more. This young man was universally liked and highly regarded. The death of such a capable and conscientious American citizen is greatly mourned in this community.

What Other Editors Say

General Martin

The writer was one of a small number who had opportunity to meet General Martin, the democratic candidate for governor, on his recent overnight visit here. Impressions gained from a half hour conversation may be of interest to Democrat-Herald readers.

The general is a man of medium size and build, with white hair. He is about 70 years of age and looks it, somewhat less dynamic in personality than his photographs indicate, though we have not seen him at close quarters that must have been a tiring day. He has an impressive face, reflecting both intelligence and energy, the professional army officer at his best.

The writer talked little politics with the general, asking him only "how things looked," to which the answer was "Fine; I don't see how they could be better." Apparently this was the stock answer he was giving all inquirers, the only thing he said in the course of a half-hour that showed any trace of affectation. Conversation covered a range of things. The general is a native of Southeastern Illinois near the birthplace of one of the writer's grandfathers, a good place for democrats to incubate, incidentally, the country having been settled from the South a century or so ago.

General Martin impresses one as clear-headed and sound. His judgments are expressed with moderation. He has been talking with many who know him here. He has made a study of the highway system, as talk concerning it revealed clearly. He is a conservative, careful yet energetic temperament, if our size-up is worth anything.

Our belief is that if elected General Martin will make an able governor. Whether he will be a successful candidate remains to be seen. We have not heard him speak, or even seen him meet the public. He does not look like a glad-hander or a back-slapper. We do not believe he should try to be one. It is his misfortune that he is being heralded to the public as a cheap-power Messiah, a cure-all for what ails us, etc. He does not fit these specifications (who does, for that matter) and will fail to convince in such a role. He is essentially of a conservative type, a highly intelligent and highly honest gentleman who has spent his life in the service of his country and now seeks at three score and ten to crown an honorable career with a still higher distinction. That he has capacity for public office has been demonstrated by his two terms in congress.—Baker Democrat-Herald.

No Wonder They Cuss NIRA

Dehydrators of Yakima valley, who took apple growers into the courts because they had the nerve to decide that they would not sell their cull apples at less than $7.50 per ton, have, no doubt, since the court decision in favor of the growers, caught themselves asking what in heck is the country coming under NIRA and its associate codes of fair treatment and ethics. For not only did Yakima growers figure that $7.50 was a fair price to ask for culls, but the state department of agriculture backed them in their decision and made the price mandatory on other growers who might otherwise be tempted to aid and abet what has come to be known as chiseling. For it is strange, but true, that in every growing community of the Pacific northwest there are a few growers who view with suspicion most every plan that has to date, been devised for the protection of the industry as a whole.

Were it not for this, all growers of apples would obtain a remunerative return for their culls, just as dehydrators do for the dried apples which they produce from these culls.—Hood River News.

Business On the Up Grade

Business Week reports that while the strike situation is doubtless an obstacle to immediate improvement in the business situation, there are some encouraging factors in this uncertain period. The week ending September 8 shows the first weekly gain since July 21. Bank debits rose sharply. Steel operations increased. Retail sales in September are well ahead of last year.

The Pacific coast is showing the largest gain since July. This review of the business situation dovetails with reports received from many points in Oregon. East of the mountains retail sales have taken a sudden rise and merchants report an almost normal amount of business. Business locally leads last year's by a wide margin.

The time has come for more optimism. There are ample reasons for it and also there is imposed on everyone a determination to stop rocking the boat.—McMinnville Telephone-Register.

A Good Chance

J. M. Person, who has been appointed county chairman for the national housing act, is well fitted for the important work given him by Edgar Freed, state director. He is one of the county's most capable citizens. With the wholehearted co-operation of the people in this county much can be done through this governmental act to promote work for the building trades and increase employment. As we view it, it has more possibilities for the promotion of recovery than any other one thing yet proposed.

Plenty of evidence that things are on the "up and up" in this community is seen with the installation of a third more safety deposit boxes by the Commercial National bank. This institution is making real progress.

Unfortunately, to make money we must spend money.—Ex.

Yell Leaders Named at Hills

Philoexian Club Officers Selected for This Year

Cheer leaders and a song leader were chosen by competitive try-outs before the assembly Wednesday night. The yell leaders are LaVerne Abendroth and Helen Nelson, while Allan Sigler is song leader. The Hillsboro yell club, which has approximately 150 members, opened the year under the direction of Miss Edwina Broadbent of Salem, who is capably filling the position vacated by Miss Edith Findley.

Clarence Young, attorney at Portland, was guest speaker in the Hillsboro assembly. He delivered an interesting and informative speech on the Constitution of the United States.

Student body ticket sales are expected to pass last year's record by 50 per cent. Students desiring to take part in any kind of school activity, such as athletics, plays or voice student activities, are required to buy one of these tickets.

The Philoexian club elected officers last week to assume their duties for the present year. It is customary for the outgoing officers to select seven girls from the junior class and the girls of the school year to carry on the business of the club starting in the fall opening of school, at which time these seven candidates are elected to office by ballot.

The officers are: Marie Doern, president; Dorothy Becker, vice-president; Florence Holcomb, secretary; Betty Havens, treasurer; Kathleen McAlear, chaplain; Oradell Prickett, reporter; Frances Fields, conductress; Miss Mary Yoder and Miss Lilla Homedew, advisers. This club is exclusively for senior girls. Invitations are extended to all senior girls before the assembly last Wednesday, which is the general custom each year.

County Gets Relief Funds

Washington county's share of liquor funds for the third quarter totaling $7935 was received today by R. W. Well, county relief chairman, and will be applied to relief purposes. Notice was also received that the county's allotment from the government for SERA and relief work during the month of October would be $6325.

Practically all available men in the county are now working on SERA projects, Leon S. Davis, personnel manager, stated today. Logging for the various community wood projects was started this week and three loads of timber taken from the Forest Grove area. The pipe laying project is expected to be completed this week as in the Aloha-Elmonica road job.

Clifford Smith, director of rural rehabilitation programs, is expected here next week to confer with the county relief committee and rehabilitation sub-committee.

PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL LIVESTOCK EXPOSITION

Opens Saturday In Portland

For 23 years this exposition has annually given Oregon farmers, stockmen, sheepmen and others an opportunity to meet, exhibit their stock or products and exchange ideas about the development of better herds or crops.

This encouragement of careful breeding and proper management has in a great measure been responsible for Oregon's position today as a nationally known source of production of fine wool, stock and fruit products.

The First National Bank of Portland commends the Pacific International Livestock Exposition for the way it has aided in the development of improved agricultural and stock raising methods.
