The Hillsboro Argus assumes no financial responsibility for errors published in its columns, but in cases where this paper is at fault will reprint that part of an advertisement in which the typographical mistake occurs.

An Independent Newspaper, Whose Services and Policies are Based on the Principle of the Golden Rule.—"And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise."—Matthew 7:12.

Stand Dangerous

The very fact that Zimmerman advocates the repeal of the Oregon criminal syndicalism law, our only protection against the forces that would overthrow the United States government and its institutions, is plenty of reason why he should not be entrusted with the governorship of this state. Zimmerman is trying in some of his talks to indicate his sympathy with the "new deal" and Roosevelt, but his attitude on this protective measure alone put him entirely out of the class with our great president.

General Martin has stood four-square with the Roosevelt administration and had the backing of the administration when he entered the race at the request of hundreds of Oregon citizens. He still has the support of the administration and by all means those favoring and supporting Roosevelt should vote for General Martin, a he-man.

Oregon has a rare opportunity of securing for governor a high type of citizen and a man that made an excellent record in congress in behalf of his state and his country. He is a true patriot, who would fill the governor's chair with dignity, honor and credit to this state.

Oregon needs a fearless executive and not a politician. We believe that General Martin fills the prescription.

Presumptive

Actions of Willis Mahoney, defeated candidate for governor in the democratic primaries, or of his supporters, seem somewhat presumptive. Some of his rabid followers stormed Martin headquarters and asked that his platform be adopted for the general election. Mahoney was clearly defeated in May and an attempt to shove his platform off on to the sturdy General Martin is going too far. The Klamath Falls mayor is quite the opportunist, being a resident of the state only two years and trying to run things. A Southern Oregon paper before the primaries pointed out that Mahoney in an advertisement had said that he never voted against compensation for veterans. The editor pointed out that Mahoney had never had the opportunity through never having been a member of congress. This paper also made a query as to where Mahoney was during the great war inasmuch as he was of age.

Henry Advises

Manager Will Henry of the Dairy Cooperative has urged the dairymen to continue to give their support to the Oregon milk law even though many promises that the board has made to milk producers have not been kept. The milk law has done more to relieve the dairy farmer of sorry plight than any other factor, he said. Look back to what prices and conditions in this field were less than a year ago and consider the strides that have been made. It seems logical that more can be accomplished under such a plan than under the old hit-or-miss conditions.

If newspapers do not always agree with some kinds of politicians it often results in a cry of "subsidized" or "controlled" press. With mighty few exceptions one will nearly always find newspapers sincere, honest and patriotic, and always interested in the development and advancement of the community and its

Reports of the Yamhill-Washington County Herd Improvement association should prove interesting to farmers in this section. Several Washington county herds are making remarkable records. Such work should prove a good investment.

Oregon people should remember that General Martin promises "the application of the New Deal principles to Oregon by an administration friendly to and co-operating with President Roosevelt," if elected governor.

Hillsboro has lowest tax levy ratio in the entire state. This is due to good management and administration. This city in recent years has been fortunate in having successful and capable business men serve in governmental capacities.

By reducing the assessment ratio to be cent, proponents of the measure shift the tax burden from the utility companies to the owner of the small evidenced would indicate more love of party than of country.

A Good Man

R. Frank Peters, candidate for judge of the circuit court for Washington and Tillamook counties, merits the support of the electorate in the coming general election. He is a conscientious citizen, a sincere and honest man of ability, who has the highest respect of all who know him.

Mr. Peters is a native of this county, having been born and reared on a dairy farm near Hillsboro, Seventeen years of his 24 years' law practice in Oregon have been in Washington county.

Due to the great amount of legal work that develops in this county it is entirely logical that the circuit judge should be from this section as a benefit to litigants and a saving to the state. The bulk of the court business for this district is in this county, due to its closeness to Portland and its much greater population.

No true, conscientious citizen would make a mistake by voting for R. Frank Peters for circuit judge.

A new year is starting for the local chamber of commerce with a new group of officers. The new officers are men of ability and should provide good leadership for the civic group, which has been a tremendous factor in the life of the hom community for many years.

Price Fixing by Code

Theoretically price fixing under NRA codes is sound, yet in practice it has given more trouble, probably, than any other part of the entire pro-

The aim has been to reverse the process by which the country sank deeper and deeper in the bog of depression. After the stock market crash late in 1929, prices fell, men were thrown out of work, and the wages of those who held their jobs were cut. A low selling price meant a low wage hence the attempt under the NRA to make possible the boosting of wages through the fixing of prices at a level that would support the wages.

What took place in the lumber industry serves as an example. Huge stocks of lumber were on hand when the depression broke, and the only way of loving them was by rapid decline in price. ontinue production and sell at cut prices it was ecessary for the lumber companies to slash wages. In consequence employes were getting barely enough for food, and cheap food at that, a little bootleg, perhaps, and gas for their cars if they had to drive to and from work. For the rest of what they had to have they went in debt, and what they could do

The NRA sought to remedy this by fixing the price of lumber at an amount sufficient for payment of a living wage. It sought, too, to end the because the maintaining of a fairly high price level would obviously be difficult if not impossible in the face of overproduction. The logic back of price fixing was sound.

Yet the price fixing requirement in the lumber code has stirred violent dissension, and despite its approval by a majority of the directors of the West Coast Lumberman's association, its elimination is not unlikely.

The practical difficulty has been that consumers either are unable to buy lumber at the established prices, or are not interested in buying it. High prices of commodities that remain unsold do no one any good, manufacturer, dealer or wage earner.

The perplexing part of the problem is whether wages will have to be cut if lumber mills are permitted to set their own prices. Will they set them too low? There should at least be some safeguard against the return of the old vicious circle—dull business, slashed prices, reduced wages, diminished buying power, duller business. Price fixing or no price fixing the depression will be with us as long as business lags and men fail to receive an adequate night. Not just because the pronouncements in it meet with the ideas that are entertained by this scribe, but rather perhaps because of the class of men who criticised and condemned it.

The president is talking to a different class of American citizens than have ever before had a champion in Washington. They constitute about 85 per cent of the people of this nation. U.S. government statistics gathered under the Coolidge adment statistics gathered under the coolinge ad-ministration showed that more than 85 per cent of American citizens were and are poor; have lean, narrow lives, with few of the comforts and none of the luxuries. These are the folks that the president is thinking about. God bless him for it, for his courage and greatness tos toop to the poor and the mean and champion their rights and their cause.

There are those who like to say and whisper that the president is championing lawlessness and violence and breaking down the morale in asking for a fuller life for those who have sat on the thin seats not just those in need, but those who do no ave all of the every day comforts of life. True there has grown up a small crew of self seekers and worthless individuals, who are capitalizing on the present situation to perpetuate their worthlessness, but they do not constitute any perceptible per-centage of the vast army of good American men and women who toil and worry patiently day after day and skimp with Spartan self-denial that they may maintain their self-respect and their integrity. These are the citizens that the president is interested in, and that he speaks to, and whose cause he

Just at the moment political partisanship will color the view of many of those who know that the president speaks the truth and will make them take sides against their own interests, but even that will fade before the power of public opinion which senses that the time is drawing near for a "fuller life" for that the time is drawing near for a "fuller life" for every citizen who works and builds and is the sinews of the nation.-The Sheridan Sun.

The Grange Objects

Vigorous opposition to the proposed constitutional amendment to limit Oregon tax levies to 20 mills has been the stand taken by the executive committee of the Oregon state grange.

Grange officials have analyzed the measure.

They have found what is behind the honeyed words that imply a reduction of the tax load. Analysis of the measure shows that not only will it eliminate the state system of higher education, close schools in many rural districts and curtail fundamental services in cities and towns below all standards of efficiency, but it will shift the burden of taxation from the corporation and the big in come property owners to owners of small farms and home and the small farm. The ratio fixed by the bill lets the owner of big urban income property "out" but the small property owner "in." The proposed measure will upset the Oregon tax system, agreed by experts to be workable and adapted to needs and conditions of the state.

It has been seen as merely the initial move to force a sales tax upon the people of Oregon by cut-ting revenue below a reasonable limit for maintenance of fundamental services. The measure bears a brand not placed there
