as the highway department's contribution to the counties and to the state police.

After State Treasurer Holman had advertised another $250,000 block of unemployment relief certificates for sale to finance December relief needs the liquor commission suddenly discovered that liquor profits would take care of the situation without resort to additional certificates and the sale was called off.

The "safety-responsibility" act which is being sponsored by the legislative interim committee on roads and highways is being facetiously referred to the "dog bite" bill. Opponents of the measure declare that it is founded upon the theory that every dog is entitled to one good bite before being muzzled. Furthermore if the offending motorist behaves like a good dog for three years after being muzzled, that it does not have any serious accidents during that period, his muzzle will be removed until he does become involved in another accident.

Dr. W. H. Lytle, state veterinarian, calls attention to the fact that the United States department of agriculture has just classified Oregon as being tuberculosis accredited free. This makes the entire Pacific Northwest Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah and Nevada—tuberculosis-free territory. Oregon has been carrying on bovine tuberculosis work since 1911, millions of tests being made in that time.

Any attempt on the part of the coast counties to remove the toll provisions from the coast bridges contract will probably meet with strenuous opposition, particularly from southern and eastern Oregon counties, according to information reaching the capitol. The Coast bridges program met with unanimous support in the last legislative session largely because they were being promoted as self-liquidating projects to be paid for out of tolls. In fact the session went on record by an almost unanimous vote as opposed ever to diverting any of the current revenues of the highway commission toward payment of the bridge debt, except an amount equivalent to the annual cost of free ferry service which the bridges will supplant. Ferry service on the Coast highway now costs $125,000 a year. This figure was expected to amount to $175,000 within five years with the increase in traffic and the demand for all-night service. Retirement of the bridge bonds, interest payments, maintenance of the bridges and operation of the draws on the highway and $150,000 a year of approximately $300,000 a year of $125,000 more than the present cost of the ferry service. Should the legislature approve the free bridge policy it would mean that this amount would have to come out of new highway construction in some other section of the state, a consideration which can be depended on to stir up plenty of argument in any legislative session.

Thirteen experimental nursery schools are now operating in Oregon as a part of the emergency education program, providing employment for 26 teachers on relief rolls and 13 cooks. Three of these schools are located in Portland and one each in Hillsboro, Salem, Oregon City, Toledo, St. Helens, Pendleton, Klamath Falls, Albany, Corvallis and Eugene. Four other nursery schools will be opened soon, according to C. A. Howard, state superintendent of public instruction. Each of these schools is caring for 25 under-privileged children between the ages of two and four years with an all-day program featuring play, music, games, training in health habits, a properly prepared noon-day meal and an afternoon health talk. Parent meetings to consider problems in child development are also conducted by the nursery school instructors.

Miss Roberta Barnes of the local squad had high score and average for the women, while Neil Stangel was high for the Guardsmen.

Tell Me Another

And now Herman Trachel of Bethany comes along with a record breaking crop of tomatoes. This one is hard to beat and I doubt whether anyone in this state can do him one better when it comes to raising tomatoes. Well, anyway Herman raised 302 on one vine. Of course the vine had to be a long one to accommodate so many tomatoes. It was 13 feet long and seven feet wide.

In other words his whole patch was made up of one vine and that is something. Perhaps we ought to look at Al Smith. People still scold the voters silently for being so foolish as to vote for the other fellow.

People never do things right for the politicians but they do things right for the voters. It is the voters who keep the politicians honest. It is the voters who elect the governor and the Oregonian votes for Dunne's election and Peter Zimmerman thinks he might make it.

There's the picture and one of the three is going to come out on top regardless of guesses, bets and straw votes. Anyway the losers will get to know the winners in practice public speaking—and that's worth something.

Sometimes losers should be thankful that they lost and they probably won't get to first base as none of the three want to give in and it will no doubt end up by everybody doing exactly as they please anyhow—that's the way as any kind of conference gets.

And the world will go on just the same and we'll all be just as happy as ever because if the diplomats can't solve anything why should we worry?

Jackie is seen as a fine two-fisted boy who is nearly crowded out of his father's life and affections through the plotting of an unprincipled aunt and her no less unprincipled son. To judge from advance reports, no story of boyhood has brought to the screen a founder understanding or a more touching situation.
