Let's Unite to Win

Some bitter partisans with their attacks on the Roosevelt administration and the New Deal reveal little sympathy for the common man or average American citizen. They do not take into consideration where we might be today if it were not for our having a president with courage to act in providing relief.

They cry about the excessive expenditures. True that makes good political propaganda, but did you ever stop to consider that income tax rates now are small in comparison with what they were after the world war and in comparison with those in England and other countries. Those who have, in this land of plenty should do everything within their power to ease the burdens of depression.

Heavy taxation on incomes is a means of redistribution of wealth. It will do more good in circulation through government expenditures than in piling up in the hands of a small minority. We have heard some, who are now the bitterest critics of these expenditures, in years past, get up in public meetings here and openly assert that some form of redistribution is necessary. Is it wrong when it is actually being put into operation?

This nation spent billions for war purposes with patriotic fervor back in 1917 and 1918. Economic forces of today are far more dangerous enemies than those of war time. Billions for reconstruction and to fight the enemy of want and despair in our ranks today seem more logical than expenditures for destruction. United in patriotic endeavor we can win this conflict and are doing so in spite of non-co-operative forces.

Small Business Protected

Senator McNary takes a dig at price-fixing on the ground that it hurts small business, probably because it seems the popular thing to do. Some of us must be awfully dumb, but we cannot understand how price-fixing or protection will hurt the small business. Rather it should serve as an aid for the smaller business against bigger institutions, which are or should be prevented from cutting under them.

A suitable answer to such attacks is found in the expression of fifty representatives of NRA codes operating in Oregon. They declared that industry has been aided materially and that they would not give up the codes "for anything in the world." These representatives, as many appreciate, contend that the prime need is for some plan of more effective enforcement. Every possible protection should be given those who sincerely co-operate in doing their part in the recovery program.

Automobile dealers in a recent poll showed 77 per cent favoring the motor vehicle code. A recent meeting of representatives of 23 durable goods industries adopted a resolution affirming faith in the "basic principles of the NRA" and favored retention of open price filing provisions.

Shortsighted

Critics of relief efforts of the government are shortsighted. Stability of government, property, investments and family life are much greater through providing security, opportunity and a chance for a "more abundant life" for all rather than to be faced with millions of our neighbors and friends being on a starvation basis. This paper is in sympathy with efforts to provide old age pensions and unemployment insurance in reason. All will be the happier for bringing about a greater sense of security and happiness for those less fortunate.

Stringent Laws Needed

More stringent laws for driving automobiles are in order to make a real impression in the "Let's Quit Killing" campaign. A legislative committee investigating this question has completed its work for recommendation at the next legislature and if adopted their plans should go a long way toward eliminating the reckless automobile driver. A few jail terms and the taking away of drivers' licenses for reckless and drunken driving will help a great deal.

A Portland communist being tried on a criminal syndicalism charge received a long and fair trial, something different than he would have been up against if he had been attacking the Russian government. A like offense under the Soviet would probably result in a 15-year term in Siberia or immediate execution.

Broadcasting of football games increases the interest in the games and does not interfere with game attendance. Any red-blooded fan would rather sit on the game if at all possible than to have to take it over the radio.

Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving Day—a day to be thankful for the many blessings we have enjoyed during the past year—good health, enough to eat in this land of plenty, an admirable climate and the best country in which any man could make his home. Thankful that we have lived in this history-making epoch, even though times have seemed rather strenuous occasionally; thankful that we are coming out of the depression; thankful for the optimism with which the people are looking toward the future; thankful for a president with courage and fortitude enough to lead us into a New Deal which means the fellowship of men, and last but not least thankful that we are good Americans living in the best country in the world—a country without a peer.

Buy Christmas Seals

Today marks the opening of the Christmas Seal Sale. Christmas Seals have brought us much to be thankful for in the fight against tuberculosis. Every citizen should help this worthy cause by buying as many of these seals as possible. Put them on letters and packages and in this manner carry the message on.

Someone or some group in your community is doing a public service in the selling of these seals. They are giving of their time. The nice thing to do is to make their work as easy as possible. You are not doing them personally a favor when you buy, but you are assisting in the national fight against the great "white plague."

What Other Editors Say

Burbank, Cal., citizens, given the opportunity to vote on an amendment to the city charter which would have made publication of proposed ordinances and council proceedings optional instead of compulsory, turned it down by almost two to one. These citizens, who are now the bitterest critics of these expenditures, in years past, get up in public meetings here and openly assert that some form of redistribution is necessary. Is it wrong when it is actually being put into operation?

A New Political Lineup

Despite what politicians wish to believe to the contrary, there is no lack of evidence that a new political lineup is in the making, and it is suggested that, in the near future, our two major parties will come to be known as Conservatives and Liberals, with platforms and principles similar to those of the parties of the same name in England, prior to the coalition form of government.

Our Nation's Cornerstone

Educators throughout the nation are giving enthusiastic and strong support to the Roosevelt administration. There's a reason. The New Deal has been the source of education and education is the very cornerstone of our nation.

Much has been said about the benefits the present administration has given to finance, to labor and to the forgotten man. Yet the benefits to our schools and school children have been equally large, perhaps even more far-reaching. Affecting millions of children they affect also millions of parents. At the beginning of 1933 education faced its greatest crisis of the century. While the education of millions of children was being drastically or entirely retarded, other millions of boys and girls were being denied essential educational services through reduced curricula. Teachers likewise were being thrown out of employment by the tens of thousands, while the salaries of those remaining had been cut to wages below decent living standards. Then came the New Deal. Emergency educational programs gave employment to an additional 35,000 teachers. Eight million dollars was provided for relief of unemployed teachers.

The democratic victories in 1932 and 1934 were its salvation. More and more teachers and parents of this nation are realizing that fact and pledging their permanent loyalty to the party of progress and recovery.—The Oregon Democrat.

"We know more and more that the East has a stake in the West and the West has a stake in the East, that the Nation must and shall be considered as a whole and not as an aggregation of disjointed groups."—President Roosevelt.

Co-operative Head

Speaker at Laurel
W. W. Henry, manager of the dairy co-operative, speaking before the Laurel unit Tuesday night, gave a brief resume of the history and negotiations leading up to the organization of the co-op and of the association's work dealing with the milk control bill.

He answered charges that have been made as to enormous expenditures for lobbying, etc. in conjunction with the passage of the milk control measure, saying that not much more than $200 was spent. Most of it was for an attorney to draw up the bill.

Need for re-appointing the directors in the drive to enforce the city ordinance was brought out by Mr. Newby, field representative, who said Washington county should have two directors instead of one. He felt that this county should be divided as to districts by the highway.

Senator George Attkin and Representative E. L. Ross, who were present, seemed favorable to milk control and to the proposed changes in the measure.

Portlander to Address Old Age Pension Meet

Bart Ellermer of Portland will address the Hillsboro old age pension meeting Sunday at 2:30 p. m. at the Christian church. It was decided at the meeting Sunday afternoon in the Methodist church to hold the meetings weekly during December. About 25 more active members were added at the last meeting. R. L. Putnam, president of the local club, reports a very marked growing interest in the Townsend plan in Washington county.

City Launches Drive Against Over-Parking

Twenty-three local residents were arrested Tuesday in the drive to enforce the city ordinance prohibiting parking more than two hours in the business district. The worst offenders were local business men, according to George McGee, city manager.
