Victorious Christian Living

Text: 1 John 5:1-12

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Dec. 30.

OUR lesson, which presents the topic, "Victory Through Christ," introduces the picture of Christ as King and Conqueror. The previous Christmas story told of His coming into the world.

"He of good cheer," said Jesus to his disciples, "I have overcome the world." Our lesson is a commentary on these words. In His overcoming of the world, Christ gives victory to individual men in their effort to overcome sin and selfishness.

We are living in a world that offers constant incentives to selfishness where it does not tempt men to the grosser sins. Selfishness is in reality the deepest of all sins and its at the root of all sins, but it appears to us clothed in disguised and sometimes attractive forms.

A man may be very unselfish toward his own family or his own group or his own country, but at the same time ruthless in actions as they affect other people and other countries. A man may clothe under the guise of ambition, success, and what is called "self-interest," a course of life that is utterly out of harmony with Christmas service and the principles of love and brotherhood.

When a man finds a better instrument or tool for his purpose than the one he is using, he does not need to be urged to use the new one and discard the old one. And there is a sense, therefore, in which, as we discover a better way of society and men become convinced that it is a better way, we shall enter that way very much as we adopt new inventions and better methods in the physical world.

But underlying all our external life is a persistent problem of man's relationship to his fellow man. No matter how much we improve outward conditions, or social organization, there will still be tragedy in human life where sin and selfishness continue.

When the social engineers have done all in their power to plan and better society, we shall be far short of its achievement unless men have the will and purpose to live in right relationships with one another. Meanness and selfishness will find a means of defeating the highest purposes, unless they themselves are conquered and driven out by love and goodness.

To overcome evil with good is the method and goal of the great struggle in which all good men and women are engaged. This was the supreme purpose of Jesus in coming into the world, and it is the victory through Him we may achieve.

To overcome the world in our own hearts and in our own lives is no cheap or easy victory. We cannot accomplish it unless we live on a high plane where we have the constant inspiration of communion with those who have lived nobly and who have left us a good example.

The height of all such communion with the most inspiring example that it offers, and the power of a Savior to help us, is in our relation to Jesus. To find God hand were Sunday dinner guests at the Lorenz home. The families are former South Dakota friends.
