The Conversion of Peter

Text: John 1:37-42; Mark 1:14-18

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Jan. 6.

Of particular interest in the career of a great man is its starting point, or rather the period in which he makes the decision that launches his career.

A man destined to play a great part in the founding of Christianity was the apostle Peter. How did he come to know Jesus? What led him to accept the Master's call to discipleship?

It is this simple beginning with which our lesson deals. The picture is one of John the Baptist standing with two of his disciples. Looking upon Jesus who was walking nearby, John said, "Behold, the Lamb of God."

The two disciples, who heard John say this, followed Jesus, and Jesus, turning, asked them what they were seeking. Their reply was to ask Jesus where He dwelt.

To this Jesus said, "Come and see," and the two disciples of John spent that day with him.

One of the two who heard John speak and who thus came to know Jesus, was Andrew. We do not know a great deal concerning Andrew. So far as we can judge from the New Testament record, he was a plain, patient man, capable of large faith and devotion, but in whose life experience there but no great temptations and no great crises.

So far as the record goes, the most notable thing that his brother did was to go and find his brother Simon, later called Peter, and bring him to Jesus. Then began that intimate relationship in which Jesus immediately gave Simon a new name, or nickname, "Thou shalt be called, Cephas, which is by interpretation, Peter," or a rock.

So much for the record in John's Gospel. The record in Mark's Gospel is similar and less complete. It is perhaps, also, insignificant except when one takes into account the fuller story in John's Gospel.

Mark tells us that, after John was arrested, Jesus came into Galilee preaching the Gospel. As An Estate Not every father is able to leave to his son a big estate made up of lands, mortgages and bonds, but any father can bequeath to his children an estate worth indefinitely more—one for which they will rise up and call his name blessed. He can leave an honorable name, a good reputation, the memory of a good life and a record of fair dealing. He can teach his son to have a profound respect for a fact, a deep reverence for character, thirst for knowledge and a willingness to work. If any son has all this he will not need any money that may be willed to him; if he does not have this, no money left him will do him much good. This is an estate any man can leave to his children.—Ex.
