Here's a Tractor That Walks

This farmer finds his "tractor" useful on muddy or slushy roads. Wheel-driven tractors get stuck in the muck, but with two legs, one of which pushes while the other gets into place to make the next push, this makeshift contraption, powered by a gas engine, manages to "walk" along very satisfactorily.

Mott Seeks Change in Land Grant Law

Congressman James W. Mott has introduced a bill to amend the Stanford O. & C. Land Grant to provide for annual reimbursement to counties in Oregon for tax loss through reversioning of this land in the federal government.

He has also introduced two bills on behalf of the Tongue Point Naval Base—one authorizing an appropriation for the further development of the base and one to refund to Clatsop county the sum of $100,000, the amount expended by the county for the purchase of the naval base site, in the event the war department refuses to further develop it.

Three thousand bills were introduced in the House of Representatives on the opening day.

Banks Man Pleased with His Advertising Results

"Will you please discontinue my ad and I will say it brought good results as I have sold nearly all my dry first-class seed. I have a limited amount left but it is going fast. Plenty of second-class yet. I hope this year will be good for all business. Your friend and well wisher."

Thus writes Hugh Moore of Roy about advertising in the Argus.

Schoolman Oats Prove Worth

EUGENE—Out of seven western Lane county farmers who started demonstrations in the spring of 1934 to compare rust-resistant Schoolman oats with varieties commonly grown in their section, six are satisfied that the Schoolman oats yield better than the varieties they were growing, reports County Agent O. S. Fletcher. These men and their neighbors plan to plant Schoolman oats again in 1935, and will have some seed to supply other coast farmers, Mr. Fletcher says. Those who co-operated in the demonstrations were Martin Brothers and H. J. Metz, Ada; A. H. Benson, Florence; E. D. Herring and W. C. Waite, Cushman; and Peter S. Rice and George H. Johnson, Lane county farmers who started

A Message From The Audit Bureau of Circulations

What is the Audit Bureau of Circulations?

TO TAKE the guess-work out of advertising is the sole object of the A. B. C., a co-operative association made up of publishers, advertisers and advertising agencies. It is a going and successful concern. It was formed twenty years ago and during these years has saved advertisers hundred of thousands of dollars by squeezing the water out of inflated circulation claims of some publications and endorsing those which always operated on a paid basis.

What does the A. B. C. do?

Through more than sixty auditors it audits and verifies the circulation data of its newspaper and periodical members and sends out this information in the form of standardized reports to local and national advertisers and advertising agencies.

Who are its members?

Newspapers, magazines, periodicals, business papers and farm papers; local and national advertisers and advertising agencies in the United States, Canada, Mexico, West Indies and Hawaii—these make up its membership.

Ask the Hillsboro Argus for A. B. C. reports. These reports will tell you all you want to know about its circulation—such facts as the amount of circulation, how it was secured, where and how it is distributed, how many copies are paid for, the number of subscribers in arrears and other important facts which an advertiser should know.
