CHAPTER XIV

THE speech which Neal Conrad made before the national convention in Madison Square garden...

She had been drowned in sleep, the profound, prolonged oblivion of utter exhaustion...

"Anne," said Neal again. And again, "Darling."

She laughed comfortably and stretched out her arms.

"No, that is not enough—worth more than anything else in the world. But you don't wake me up in the middle of the night usually to tell me so! You expect me to take it for granted!"

"What is it?" she asked. "I wanted to tell you how much I love you."

"What is it?" she asked. "I wanted to tell you how much I love you."

"What is it?" she asked. "I wanted to tell you how much I love you."

"What is it?" she asked. "I wanted to tell you how much I love you."

"What is it?" she asked. "I wanted to tell you how much I love you."

"What is it?" she asked. "I wanted to tell you how much I love you."

"What is it?" she asked. "I wanted to tell you how much I love you."
