Eliminate "Isms"

The Elks lodges throughout the nation in co-operation with the American Legion, chambers of commerce, service clubs and patriotic organizations are undertaking a splendid program of Americanism that if enacted by the congress will do much to clear up the many "isms" that have been breeding in this country.

America is the land of true freedom and opportunity and the good citizenship wants it understood that communism or any other of the "isms" is not wanted in this country. These organizations seek governmental steps to outlaw organizations that have for their purpose the overthrow by force or violence of the American constitutional government.

Sought for Years

Most people will admit that the objectives and principles of NRA were praiseworthy and those who have had anything to do with it realize that lack of teeth and co-operation have been a serious hindrance in successful operation.

Mrs. J. W. Goodin, pioneer daughter, who was buried last week, was loved and respected by all who knew her.

The Case Workers' Relief

Editor Argus—Regardless of what part of the county you reside in, there is a case worker for your section of the county—you people who are on relief and those getting SERRA relief work.

People should be able to do a little thinking for themselves, not in a selfish way, but considering everything in the interests of others as well as themselves. How could a case worker give a great deal of help to one family and have to slight many other needy ones because "hogish" individuals got an upperhand, obtaining more than they deserved?

Radicalism and contempt will not get people anywhere, but kindness and courtesy extended those who are our friends in difficulties of the kind we've got, and we're sure that we'll have the hard bumps and the all that can and should be done for us by the state and the work of our friends and case workers can be thus made more pleasant—otherwise they will soon need relief from relief work—nerves cannot stand everything.

Organization of a cow testing association in this county should prove beneficial to the dairymen. As we see the move it is good business and from talking with those who have been in the Yamhill-Washington County Herd Improvement association they feel the same way about it.

City zoning as advocated by the municipal planning commission would be a great forward step for Hillsboro. Under present conditions the person, who would like to make a goodly investment in a home, has no assurance or protection against the building of any kind of a shack alongside his home.

Opportunity in Will Hillsboro, Oregon—Editor of the Argus: The attached item is from the News-Telegram, and which I hope will be read by many.

SPOKANE, Wash., Jan. 30.—At least one cemetery in the Inland Empire will never lack care. The will of the late John Atkinson established a $11,500 trust fund for the upkeep of the Peone cemetery on the Newman Lake-Foothills road.

My friend, as you cast about for a worthy cause that you may endorse at your demise, I respectfully solicit you to consider any one, or all, of the many unendowed cemeteries of the country.

I will also add that I will gladly assist in any movement toward general improvement of any of the several cemeteries.—L. E. WILKES.

Value of Winery Cited by Herbold

Honorable E. L. Ross, House of Representatives, Salem, Oregon. Dear Mr. Ross: I know that I have Winery No. 1 for the State of Oregon, and during the first year I manufactured some 5000 gallons of grape wine with alcohol contents less than 14 per cent, but the fall of 1934, due to my financial condition, I was unable to buy enough grapes to manufacture what I would have liked to do.

The Federal Revenue Tax and the State Department of the State Liquor Control Commission are charging me an exorbitant rate, so that it is impossible for us to compete with the California Wineries.

I will give you an example of what it cost me. The State of Oregon charges an annual license of $250.00, and in addition to this, I have to pay them a tax of 25c on each gallon sold; also have to pay the Internal Revenue Department 10c a gallon, and in addition to this I have to furnish surety bonds to the State Liquor Commission and the Internal Revenue Department, which costs me an additional $40.00 a year.

I understand that the state of California has some eight hundred wineries in operation, and their license is on a graduated scale, from $10.00 up, according to the amount manufactured, and their tax on each gallon is 2 1/2c, while the Internal Revenue Department charge would be the same as in this state. The state of Washington wineries are very keen competitors, as they do not have the competitors which I have mentioned above, on both sides of us, makes it extremely difficult for the producers of wine in the state of Oregon to stay in business unless we can get some relief on our operating license and the license tax, and I feel that the Oregon Liquor Commission should patronize home industry and help us out by buying our products in preference to wine from other states. To this date, I have not been able to sell, or even interest the Oregon Liquor Commission to purchase my product. I know that it is not on account of the quality of our product as I have had it examined by experts that know that it is equal to any wine in quality that they can buy.

There is another reason why this industry should be protected as we have many growers of grapes at the present time, and if we could operate on a competitive basis, there is no reason why the state of Oregon should have to purchase a single gallon of wine from outside markets, as this climate and soil is particularly adapted to raising wine grapes, and it will greatly assist many small land owners in making a profitable enterprise and a good living for hundreds of families in this state, and even though the state tax was small, the volume of business would give the state of Oregon a very substantial increase in their income from this source.

I would appreciate your keeping this matter in mind when revising the Knox Law at the present session of the legislature. Unless relief is given the wineries of this state will be forced out of business. Very truly yours, Louis Herbold sponsored by the farmer-members of the house.

Fifteen bills drafted by the legal division of the Public Works administration in Washington, D. C., were dumped into the laps of the Oregon lawmakers Tuesday by Governor Martin for their attention, but without any recommendations. The bills are intended to enable the state and its various subdivisions to reap the benefit of loans and grants to be made available by congress through the federal emergency administration of public works.

The Goss-McCloskey bill authorizing counties to issue funding bonds, the proceeds from which would be used in calling in outstanding warrants passed the senate with little opposition. The measure, it is said, would increase the market value of county bonds and would save money to the counties since the bonds could be sold to better advantage than the warrants.

City Council Acts Host of Business

(Continued from page one) tery taxes in accordance with the number of employes in the store. Report was also made on progress toward establishment of a building code ordinance. Anderson stated that this was being held up pending a city zoning measure.

Application to the county dog control board for a contract to collect the tax in the city of Hillsboro for 1935 was submitted by the council. O. O. Freeman, chief of police, was nominated as deputy tax collector.

George McGee, city manager, presented a list of proposed PWA for the city of Hillsboro. These included a sewer system, municipal water system, municipal electric distribution system, street lights, airport, swimming pool, municipal warehouse, park improvements, tennis courts and playgrounds, school, hospital, streets, sidewalks and curbs and garbage disposal plant.

McGee reported that this list had been submitted to C. Hockley of the PWA engineering board and stated that efforts would be made to obtain appropriations for several of these. Mayor J. H. Garrett was named to assist McGee in keeping in touch with progress toward this purpose.

Class A beer license applications of the Fairway Market and Piggy Wigly store were approved by the council. Card room license was granted to W. V. Wiley and a billiard room license to Clem Eslinger.

Request from Eslinger that he be permitted to operate his bowling alley on Sunday afternoons was presented by P. L. Patterson, city attorney. The council directed that an ordinance amendment be drafted permitting bowling on Sunday afternoons from noon until 7 p. m.

Report of the city health officer and fire marshal complaining against three alleged nuisances maintained in the city was presented. The city recorder was instructed to notify owners of an open cesspool on Oak street, the old laundry building near the condenser and a refuse pile at the barn back of the city hall to eliminate the objectionable conditions.

Resignation of Robb as a member of the city planning commission was accepted by the council and appointment of O. Phelps as his successor was approved. Appointment of Andrew Lentz as a member of the local fire department was also approved.

Other business included a memorial to congress urging the passage of the Wilson Building bill, reading of the annual report of the chief of police and night watchman, and instructions for the preparation of a "pin-ball" machine license and regulation ordinance. A resolution was also adopted indicating that the council was sympathetic to the establishment of a county utility district. Proposal was also presented by McGee for the installation of a city gasoline pump and the mat committee with power to act.

Protest by Elmer Farmer regarding the location of the bill board at the east entrance to the city was presented. He declared that the sign blocked the view around the highway curve and constituted a traffic menace. The council took action to request owners of the sign to move it back from the highway.
