WHEN WINTER COMES

(By Oregon State Board of Health) In the week ending January 5, 1935, the physicians of the United States reported 4965 cases of influenza, as compared to 2061 for the nearest corresponding period. Last winter in Oregon the week ending January 12 had 96 cases as compared to 31 for the seven days concluding with January 13, 1934. Thus the number of cases in 1935 is three times as bad in this state as at the same time last winter and more than twice as bad as in the United States as a whole. Winter before last was considerably colder than this one has been so far while last winter was exceedingly mild. In December 1932, Oregon had 5734 cases of influenza, but only 122 in December 1933; and in January 1934, 2081 cases, but only 122 in January 1934. This comparison of last winter and the one previous to it suggests what is a fact—influenza tends to fluctuate with the weather. The time of year for colds is also the time of year for influenza, and likewise for pneumonia. These winter diseases, in other words, are among the common difficulties of life in our present stage of civilization.

The situation does not call for alarm, such as is likely to arise in the minds of the people because they recall the terrible destruction wrought by influenza in 1918. People should consider that the situation was then aggravated because of the virulence of the causative organism and also to some extent because many doctors and nurses were away from home in the service of the nation.

The ordinary case of influenza does not require any great amount of medicine, though the complications which result from insufficient care baffle the most expert physicians. The real danger is that a mild wave of influenza might at any time become of the virulent type, and so cause death, disability and economic loss. So much has been printed and said about influenza that most persons know what they ought to do. The trouble is simply that people do not act as they should. At the present time it is important to the community and to the individuals in it, for all to attend to these points. Suspect every cold. Go to bed immediately if the weather is cold, and call your doctor and do exactly what he says. Be sure to remain in bed until you are well rested, as influenza is a great deceiver, leaving the patient far weaker than he feels. Keep your home properly heated and ventilated. Eat nothing but good food, including fruits, vegetables and cereals. Maintain an efficient working condition of the excretory organs. Keep in the sunshine as much as feasible, and be sure to take out door exercise every day when in good health. Dress to suit the weather, and be wary of going from home lightly clad just because the air is warm. You may have to return in cold and storm.

Hayward

(By Vivian Hudson) Axel Pederson purchased several thousand strawberry plants from George Wright of Orcharddale Tuesday.

Ernest Hudson and Floyd Updike called at the Tolke brothers home at North Plains and at the Ernest Lyda home near Verbotoc February 3.

W. R. Hudson left Tuesday morning for South Bend, Wash., to visit his mother, who is past 88 years of age and lives with her youngest daughter, Mrs. C. W. Wheeler, George Laerman, who was ill last week with flu, is improving. Moechnes stopped logging the last of the week to repair their donkey engine.

Acknowledging that business conditions are bad, there are still some people who note that things are on the up-and-up, did not realize how bad things were, as in the instance of the young man of Jewish extraction who when he was informed that there had been a fire in the White House in Washington, exclaimed, "My God, I didn't know things were that bad."

"Daughter," said the father, "is that young man serious in his intentions?" "Gues he must be, dad," she replied. "He's asked me how much I make, what kind of meals we have, and how you and mother are to live with."

"How is it?" inquired the plumber, arriving at last to mend a broken water pipe. "Not so bad," replied the householder. "While we were waiting for you, I've taught my wife to swim."

West Union Local Has Busy Session

West Union local of the Farmers' Union meeting at North Plains K. P. hall Thursday, voted to become a member of the state purchasing board and also of the county federation of farm organizations. Delegates include William H. Dierdorf, John Pubels, Clyde Lincoln, Arthur Connell, Russell Loftis and John Hare. Alternates are Pete Jorgensen and John Riley. Russell Loftis represents West Union in the baseball league.

Mrs. Ruth Gates is attending the home economics school at Corvallis as a delegate to represent the recreation committee of the West Union local.

A dance will be enjoyed at the meeting February 21, members to give written invitations to friends. Members from other locals are welcome. Women are asked to bring lunch.

Mason Hill

Mason Hill sewing group of the Sunshine club met Friday afternoon at the George Hill home. Present were Miss Helen Kinsey, Mesdames Lola Solberger, Maude French, May Waldorf, Beryl Johnson, and the hostess, Mae Hill. Afternoon was spent in sewing and a lunch was served by the hostess. Next sewing meeting is to be held February 27 at the B. E. Waldorf home. The services announced for last Sunday evening at the school house by Mr. Everett were cancelled on account of illness. M. Conrady and Olaf Olson spent several days in Portland last week. Beauty is only skin deep, according to an oft-repeated saying. Wonder if our beauty specialists should refer to their business as a skin game? And is that why we hear the expression, beautiful but dumb (shallow)?—Newberg Graphic.

AN A. B. C. NEWSPAPER

for Variety of Coverage and Selling Versatility

That the modern merchant cannot do a profitable business with only one class of customers was never more true. So-called class barriers have been broken or altogether removed.

Likewise, a newspaper's success in its territory depends upon its ability to satisfy the greatest variety of readers with news—the greatest variety of merchants with profit volume.

Analyze the people of this one newspaper's audience—the families reading the Hillsboro Argus every week and you'll find the customers who patronize all classes of stores.

The Hillsboro Argus is now a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations subjecting its circulation records to annual searching inquiry of A. B. C. auditors, the results of these yearly audits are published every twelve months. In these annual reports are the HOW, WHERE and HOW MUCH circulation proof.

A newspaper's sales power must be versatile. The newspaper that is most successful in selling its own product is most successful in selling other business concerns' products.

And because it has a large variety of readers, the Argus consistently carries a large variety of local, national, and classified advertising.
