More than 80 per cent of the 39,000,000 total daily circulation of United States newspapers is known to be "First Class" because it is audited, checked and verified regularly by the Audit Bureau of Circulations. The Argus is one of these 1,017 A. B. C. newspapers—the only member in Washington county and one of only two weekly newspaper members west of the Rocky Mountains. First class circulation can be depended upon to do a first class selling job—for local retail advertisers—for national advertisers—for classified advertisers.

And during these days when everybody is doing business on a shorter margin than ever before, it's more important than ever for advertisers to get first class value and first class results from their advertising investments.

The A. B. C. membership of the Argus assures circulation of first class coverage—first class reader interest—first class selling influence. First class profit, then, is the logical result of first class sales power. To report fully on how adequate is the medium to cover and sell the buyers of its territory, an A. B. C. auditor annually makes his report which is the advertisers' buying guide for the great bulk of advertising space that is used throughout the United States.

This A. B. C. audit report gives the how, where and how much information regarding circulation of the Argus. One thousand and sixteen other newspapers prove their circulation figures by A. B. C. audits.

Committee chairmen have been straining every effort to bring out bills which have been cluttering up their dockets and many measures have gone down the drain during the week through indefinite postponement or have been snatched from such inactivity by their sponsors who have withdrawn them from the legislative hopper.

The week has seen a number of highly controversial issues disposed of. To compensate for such a loss there is talk of revising the automobile registration fee with a restoration of the old graduated fee scale ranging from $5 up to $25. Should this talk materialize to a bill it can be expected to develop one of the biggest fights of the session.

A proposal, sponsored by Senator Zimmerman, to refer the question of a lieutenant governor for Oregon to the voters was defeated by a vote of 41 to 19. The 70-car train bill and the four anti-labor bills were also killed in the house by overwhelming majorities. By a vote of 41 to 19 the senate has given the thumbs down sign and a fight over increased truck load limits no longer trailers postponed by sending the bill back to the committee. The September primary bill is still in the hands of a senate committee as are two of the four administration measures—the county unit school bill and the fee grabbing bill.

One of the most enjoyable social functions of the year in Salem was the party given by P. J. Stadelman, former secretary of state, at the Marion hotel Friday night to 140 state officials, department heads and newspapermen and their ladies. Dinner was followed by an evening of dancing. This was probably the first time in the history of the Oregon capital when so many people had gathered at so elaborate an affair as the guests of a single individual and the party established Stadelman's reputation as the perfect host as well as a competent and highly popular public official.

The verbal exchange of left handed compliments between Representatives Erwin and Angell during the course of a debate last week was not at all unusual in the experience of a legislative session. The nerves of the lawmakers are naturally pretty well unstrung after four weeks of strenuous labors and it does not take much provocation to start an argument replete with stinging remarks and bitter epithets. If the senate has thus far been fairly free of such unpleasantness it is only because its membership is composed of veterans who are better able to withstand punishment without cracking under the strain.

Leaders of the house and senate are driving ahead at full speed in an effort to clear the desks for sine die adjournment of the legislature session by the end of another week.

While March 2 has been set as the tentative date for the end of the session some doubt is expressed as to the ability to complete the task in hand by that time and
