The Evils of Insincerity

Text: Acts 5:1-6; 8:18-24

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for March 3.

WHILE mankind is undoubtedly more interested in truth than falsehood it nevertheless seems that great liars are apt to attract more interest often than great truth tellers. Perhaps this explains the popularity of the story of Ananias and Sapphira.

People refer to a great liar today as an "Ananias," though Ananias was something more than a liar. The fact is that Ananias is perhaps more closely related to most persons than they realize, because his deep sin was not in telling an untruth, but in professing to be something that he was not and to be doing something that he was not doing.

A wave of the social enthusiasm had swept over these early Christians, destroying distinctions of wealth and rank, making those who were well-to-do ready to minister to the needs of those who lacked—a sort of Christian communism, very noble for those like Barnabas, who could enter into it earnestly and sincerely, but difficult for those whose souls were not purified and enriched with the spirit of unselfishness.

THE tendency in all such situations is for ideals to become dominant and exacting in such way that individuals who have not undergone the necessary experience that enables them to respond naturally and sincerely are, nevertheless, too weak to express their dissent.
