New School Desirable

The building of a new and modern school to replace the present David Hill frame structure is under consideration by the board of district No. 7, provided a substantial federal grant may be secured through the proposed public works program of the Roosevelt administration.

An architect's preliminary drawing of the proposed school is on display in the Argus window. That it is attractive goes without saying because the modern architect can do much to a building that will make it pleasing to the eye.

The present structure has been in use for more than 45 years. It is a large frame building that many consider a hazard. The building without question has been a source of worry to Hillsboro parents over several generations, although school officials pronounce it safe and easy to clear.

None has a greater pride in this old pioneer community than the publishers of this paper, but they feel that a new and modern, well-constructed fireproof school building on the present site would be an asset to the community which cannot be overlooked.

To the average person coming into a community, perhaps not caring a great deal whether he is to live here or in a neighboring town, school buildings would be an element in the selection of his place of residence provided that person was the parent of children of school age. We believe that it goes without saying that the present building can not be considered a helpful influence in persuading anyone to make a home here.

The district is in a good financial condition, due to the careful and businesslike management of a capable school board. A building such as that proposed could easily be handled by the district. Even if no grant were available the district could easily handle the project and it merits consideration from the standpoint of providing work for the unemployed.

The individual under like conditions, as for instance, being sound financially and having a desire and need for a new home would readily, in our opinion, take advantage of a proposition that would bring a substantial federal grant to handle the cost. It would be good business in our humble economic experience.

The board has asked for the opinion of local residents and taxpayers so let us have it in the way of letters from subscribers living in district No. 7. The Argus will be happy to publish such opinions provided they are signed and not too long. Let's have the letters.

Codes Needed

Many individuals and business people throughout the length and breadth of this land of ours believing in the principles and purposes of NRA agree with President Roosevelt in his request for a continuance of the National Recovery Act for another two-year period. The president admits the imperfections of the present law and suggests action be taken to correct certain abuses.

The average business man and individual is inherently honest and believes in honesty and fair dealing. He wants to deal squarely and he expects "to do unto others as he would have others do unto him." That is essentially what is contained in most of the fair-trade practice provisions of the various codes.

"The fundamental purposes and principles of the act are sound," declared the president in asking continuance. "To abandon them is unthinkable. It would spell the return of industrial and labor chaos."

He declared that the fundamental principles of the anti-trust laws should be more adequately applied and that monopolies and private price-fixing must not be allowed or condoned. The president credited the NRA with giving employment to 4,000,000 workers, with eliminating child labor, outlawing sweat shops, with the releasing of millions of workers from starvation wages and excessive hours. He hit at "carping critics and those who seek either political advantage or the right again to indulge in unfair practices or exploitation of labor or consumers."

The president truly said that "a great code of law, or order and of decent business cannot be created in a day or a year." Too many people were looking for miracles in that they expected these generation-old problems to be worked out overnight and became impatient when after their first burst of enthusiasm everything was not perfect.

The codes are needed. They have brought order out of chaos. The re-act of one local business man is illustrative of the good that has been wrought. He fervently expressed the hope to the writer that the code structure would not be destroyed as he was unable to predict what might happen in the way of destructive practices with all barriers down.

Defeats Purpose

Action of the United States senate in rebelling against the Roosevelt works program by voting the "prevailing wage" amendment in opposition to presidential wishes tends to defeat the purposes of the measure. The public works proposal was in keeping with the expressed desire of the president in his message to congress to substitute work relief for the dole, in order to preserve the self-respect, courage and determination of the unemployed.

The works relief program was intended to provide productive jobs for the jobless that would not interfere with industry and to prepare for their absorption by industry as soon as possible.

Made work with this relief objective and paid for out of taxes in all common sense should not command more than the security wage suggested by the president. Prevailing wages as demanded will provoke resentment and protest among those who are willingly footing the bills, who comprise the great bulk of our citizenship.

Such a scale will slow up the process of absorption of this labor by private industry because many will be content with this needless government work and look upon the government as their provider. It would probably also have the result of enticing men away from private employment to enter the government service.

The votes were unquestionably actuated by the congressional spirit of catering to blocks of electoral support. The senators, both democratic and republican, who participated in this revolt cannot have had the long range vision necessary to proper working out of our recovery problems. Too much legislation is based on politics.

Steiner Opposes

Senator Steiner attacks the Roosevelt public works measure of $4,880,000,000 because it gives the president power that should rest with congress, the right to earmark the expenditures.

The administration it seems to us did an exceptionally good job in selecting the various projects under the previous work program even though the senator from Oregon infers that the Roosevelt designation of the Bonneville dam was contrary to the mandate of congress. The senator says Bonneville is not a project that furnishes lots of employment now, but rather spreads it over a long period.

Good Indication

One of the best indications of improving conditions is shown in the action of the county court in reducing the interest rate on warrants from six to five per cent. What a different picture from two years ago when it became necessary to issue scrip to keep warrants from taking too much of a reduction through inability to dispose of them. Improvement in taxpaying brought about through more money in the hands of the people and more frequent payment periods enables the court to make this change.

Enjoy Hospitality

Aloha grangers gave the Hillsboro Chamber of Commerce members and their wives another good party Thursday night. Local people always look forward to this event because of the hospitality and friendliness of these neighbors. One outstanding thing about the party has been the way they have always had it organized to serve so many people in such a short period.

Self-Aid Good Move

The county relief committee will require all those on the relief rolls to have garden plots as a self-aid plan. This is a move that should be welcomed by the workers themselves as well as other people. It will show that the relief workers are willing to do something for themselves rather than take the attitude that it is up to the government to take care of them in all particulars.

Congratulations are due the Hillsboro basketball five for carrying off the county championship. This gives the local boys a chance to enter the district tournament at McMinnville and a chance at the state title.

Supreme Court Act in Gold Cases Fair

Their credit in foreign exchange is good, according to Schulmerich. A sound dollar is based on an act of law and the ability of the issuing source to redeem it at par in value, according to Schulmerich's definition. He illustrated this by the case of Mexican and Venezuela dollars, the latter being worth nearly face value in foreign exchange, while the former only about 50 cents. The Mexican dollar contains more silver than that of Venezuela, but the difference in value results from the fact that Venezuela has a law to the effect that her dollar is redeemable at par for obligations of the government while Mexico has no such law.

Schulmerich contended that the United States could go further than at present and could stabilize free exchange of silver. Paper money with no intrinsic value has been stabilized by this country and he declared it only logical that silver, 60 per cent of which is produced by American interests, could also be stabilized.

Control of Walnut Blight Discussed

Mr. Schuster pointed out that the blight of walnuts, which has no intrinsic value has been stabilized by this country and he declared it only logical that silver, 60 per cent of which is produced by American interests, could also be stabilized.

A detailed report of blight control studies in Oregon is being printed and may be obtained through the local county agent's office. The proper time to apply the spray will be broadcasted next spring over KOAC or may be checked through the county agent.

Ladies' Night Meet Planned by Rotary

Local Rotarians will be hosts to their wives tonight (Thursday) at the annual "Ladies' Night" program. Harry Stone of Portland will be the principal speaker and will discuss "International Affairs."

George Washington's interest in the educational problem of his day and his persistent efforts to establish a national university at Washington, D. C., were cited at the Rotary club last Thursday by Dr. G. A. Odgers, professor of education and psychology at Pacific university.

The first president of this country advocated the establishment of American schools so that children might be educated in the atmosphere of American government, Dr. Odgers stated. He was also among the first to advocate schools for children not otherwise able to obtain an education.

Efforts made by Washington to establish a national university were stressed by Dr. Odgers. He declared that the reason congress failed to take action on the plan was due to the fact that the idea was far ahead of its time and that many other problems confronted the legislators of that day.
