Text: Acts 12:5-17

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for March

GENERALLY speaking, we think of a man who has been imprisoned as a bad man, one who has sinned against society. But this is not always true. Prisons, history reveals, have had a way of confining not only the very bad, but also the very good. Peter, for example, was in prison.

Someone has said that mankind in its progress throws out a vanguard and a rear guard, and though the vanguard is very different from the rear guard it suffers frequently as much from the misunderstanding, hostility, and persecution of those in the main body, who will not tolerate either the prophet, who is in advance of society, or the criminal, who harries society from the rear.

One would think that each age would learn from the mistakes of preceding ages and rectify these things, but the age-old process

Within our own generation there have been in American prisons and penitentiaries men whose only fault was the intensity of their conscientious objection to war and killing. The fact that many of these have said, as Peter did. "We ought to obey God rather than men," has made no difference.

Society is still intolerant of its saints and its prophets, especially whenever they dare in any way to challenge the existing order, or the policy and acts of a nation in a particular circumstance.

THERE are angels who visit saints and prophets in prison. How else could they survive and continue their work in the world? There is a strength and power of persistency in men of truth
