An Independent Newspaper, Whose Services and Policies are Based on the Principle of the Golden Rule—"And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise."—Matthew 7:12.

Responsibility Desired

Deferring consideration of the cabinet form of government for the state until the next legislative session and for further study by an interim committee is logical and drastic. A proposal containing such a change in our form of government must have plenty of study and consideration and such could not be had in the closing days of the legislature. Furthermore, it is highly controversial and has been badly beaten by the people.

We believe that the cabinet form, if enacted, would prove more efficient than the present hodge-podge and would eventually be an economy move for the state. It would place the responsibility for the conduct of state government directly in the hands of the governor, where it belongs, who under the present set-up gets the blame but is without the power to get results wanted.

Responsibility in the conduct of government as in the operation of a business is a very desirable feature. We predict that such a plan could, with a great deal of satisfactory results for the people, be carried down into the county and other governmental subdivisions.

What Other Editors Say

Criticizes Partisanship

Looking back to the time when they were young men, intelligent printers of fifty to sixty years will wonder why greater strides have not been made toward truer and greater rather than bigger and flashier daily newspapers.

The printing press is still a mighty power for good, notwithstanding the receding influence of many large metropolitan dailies.

Some of these big newspapers have cried to the heavens for protection of the "liberty of the press." What about the liberty of the people? Entrenched as they are by a practical monopoly of news sources, these big city owners of daily newspapers know that only a multi-millionaire would dare challenge them in competition. And multi-millionaires usually agree with their policies.

The liberties of the people have been more endangered by such newspapers than the liberties of newspapers have been endangered by American government.

In Chicago, to point an example, one publisher in particular conceals practically every department of the paper to lend a helping hand in his vicious partisan assaults.

The result of all this is that people no longer read the "cooked up" stuff of the owners of such newspapers. Is it any wonder, then, with notable exceptions that metropolitan dailies are losing their power with the masses. And this, by the way, is a tragic fact. The Huey P. Longs prosper because of such a condition. Men and women become so bitter toward such newspapers that when one of them attacks a real enemy of the people, sympathy for the enemy is at once engendered. This gives continued public life to the most unworthy individuals.

Rabid political newspapers of any party constitute a pull-back to the urge for nobler and better things in life.

No one questions the wisdom of editors who strenuously and honestly differ with government administrations. Such opposition is the sign of political health in a republic and must continue as such.

But when apparent animus, partisan bias, and misrepresentation characterize the whole makeup of almost every page, such a publication becomes merely another public enemy.

The people of America have lost the Danas and the Greeleys in large centers of population, with few exceptions. But, thanks to the country dailies and weeklies, and good books, the power of the printing press is still a bulwark in the progress of civilization throughout the world.—Printing Industry.

Would Benefit

The unicameral legislative plan did not get very far in the legislative session, due no doubt to many reasons. To us it seems like a move in the right direction. Under the present plan those opposing the one-house legislature hold that the two houses act as a check and balance. One thing is certain, it permits a lot of "buck passing" and the lack of responsibility. One house with a more substantial compensation to attract the highest type of men and women would, we believe, react to the benefit of the state and would be economy in the long run. All lawmakers under such a plan would feel a greater responsibility.

Seems Funny

Alabama federal judge holds that the Tennessee Valley Authority cannot sell electricity to people in that section. It seems like a funny set-up when the people through their governmental subdivisions cannot sell to themselves. Printers of the nation have been up against governmental competition for years in the way of government printed envelopes, but no federal judge has ever ruled against such a practice.

Get the Revenue

The state might just as well come out in the open on the matter of slot machines and other similar devices. They seem to flourish in spite of law and if they are to exist the state should receive some revenue from the operation of such machines. Extra means of providing revenue must be found so as to bring relief to property, which is exemplified to such a great degree by the burden of taxes on farm property.

Need Should Govern

There has been waste in the government relief work, but one should remember that in such a great undertaking in a short period of time it is difficult to have everything run smoothly. One thing that should ever be foremost in the minds of the committees and those in charge is that under this plan where the taxpaying pocketbook pays the bill only those truly deserving and needing should be given work.

Debt Adjustment Plan Aids Farms

Only two of these county committees failed to accomplish worthwhile results, the annual report shows. During the two years of voluntary farm debt adjustment work in Oregon it is estimated that 3500 farms were adjusted in 1934 and 17,500 farms were adjusted with a total scale down estimated in excess of $2,500,000.

Besides the chairman and secretary, the state officers included E. A. McCornack of Eugene as vice-chairman, and six district chairmen. Heading the work in this district is George Fullenwider of Carlton, while the county committee consists of W. C. Christensen of Hillsboro; H. R. Findley, Cedar Mill; J. M. Vanderzanden, Roy; Gustave Krause, Blooming, and Frank Rowell, Scholls.

This work is still going on and these committees are ready to assist at any time in working out practical settlements which will avoid court action or possible foreclosure.

THE DOCTOR MEETS THE CRISIS

(By Oregon State Board of Health)
A great moment was that on May 26, 1924, soon after midnight, when Dr. Allan Roy Dafeo, of a quarter-century a country doctor, answered a call to his second obstetrical case since dawn.

Greeted as a conquering hero by New York City last December, he told a rapid audience of 3000 in Carnegie hall, "I scribbled up in the best way I could, and took over the situation." Half-asleep from the work he had done previously that night, his long training as a country doctor, enabled him to come out of the daze to which he confessed, and to write his name for as long as medical history shall endure by the feat of bringing five children into the world and keeping them alive. "It was astonishing," he told his charmed audience, "to find that two babies had already been born and a third was arriving. The attendants told me afterward that my eyes were bulging and that with a arrival of each baby my word was 'Gosh.' It was, he recalled, unreal and dramatic. "He didn't think the babies could live, so he baptized them himself. Then he became alarmed at the condition of the mother, and for her he dashed off two and a half miles and brought a priest.

This in newspaper language opens the door to the five Dionne sisters of Callander, Ontario. Two families among Oregon citizens in the year that has just closed welcomed babies so much under weight
