Clackamas Farmers Sow Grass
OREGON CITY—Among Clackamas county farmers planning on an acreage of tall meadow oat grass for seed production this year for the first time are Howard Belton, New Era; Stanley Ray, Molalla, and L. H. Hagen, Redland. Soil and climatic conditions of Clackamas county are ideal for grass seed production, according to County Agent J. J. Inskip, who believes that many farmers of the county could profitably grow more of these crops, particularly tall meadow oat grass and chevings fescue.

Nothing is more striking than the simple innocence of the men who insist on the prompt production of a patent scheme guaranteed to produce a result.—President Roosevelt.

railroads; and now, the utilities, investors are thinking twice before sinking money into or staying with "equity" bonds. They do not know where the "New Deal" may strike next. While they must invest their money, safety of principal is their first consideration, and income second. Hence, they are limiting their investments to prime bonds.

Politics Suppress New Offerings
If the administration would come out frankly and say to business men and investors: "We are all through living in the path of discovery is now most important," there would be an overnight boom in second-grade bonds. But until the administration makes such a statement, conservative investors will not consider placing money in anything but the highest grade bonds. The uncertainties created by the government's activities are also retarding new financing. The answer is that business men, battered and beaten by politicians, are not sticking their necks out for more punishment. Hence, until the political horizon is clearer, the volume of new capital issues will continue at extremely low levels.

In addition to the above, the New Deal Securities act is also a major obstacle in the path of financing. The situation today, with strong demand for good investment issues, is ideal for refunding operations. But while the penalties under the securities act remain as drastic as they are now, few bankers or business men will dare to become involved in a security offering. Modification of the act, plus a change of heart at Washington, would bring out a flock of bond issues overnight and greatly stimulate business which is now only two per cent above a year ago and eighteen per cent below normal.

More good bond issues would of course act as a brake on advances in high-grade bond prices. But we need more bond issues to stimulate business.

Rising Living Costs Shrink Yields
Not only are better quality bonds giving a very low return on a dollar basis, but, in terms of living costs, the yield is still lower. The cost of living has risen about eight per cent since the depression low and is climbing daily with food prices leading the advance. As increases in living expenses shrink the buying power of fixed incomes, more and more investors will be forced to seek greater returns on their capital by going into lower grade bonds and into stocks.

Hence, the rise in high-grade bond prices in the face of current inflationary talk is all the more remarkable. But at some future

In 1436 traffic accidents on Oregon highways during February. That makes a total of 29 traffic fatalities for the current year compared to 37 for the same period last year.

If income tax returns are any criterion prosperity is smiling on Oregon again. The tax commission reports current returns to be 33 per cent ahead of those of a year ago. Indications now are that revenues from income taxes will far exceed the estimate made by the tax commission at the time the tax levy was promulgated in December.

Desk clerks of the house and senate are now at work revising the daily journals of the two legislative branches, a task which will keep them busy for another two weeks at least and for which they receive pay at the same rate as during the session.

Announcement this week of Governor Martin's selections for the interim committee which is to make a study of the cabinet form of government completes the personnel of that body. The governor named Moore Hamilton, Medford newspaperman and state representative, and D. O. Hood, budget director. Other members of the committee, named by the president of the senate and speaker of the house, are Senators N. G. Wallace of Bend and Allen Byrom of Portland, and Representatives L. W. Wallace of Portland, Harry Bovin of Klamath Falls and Earl Hill of Lane county.

Fertilizer Helps Cover Crops
DALLAS—Cover crops in Polk county orchards are beginning to show the beneficial effects of top-dressings with a nitrogenous fertilizer in February, reports County Agent J. R. Beck. Several different kinds of fertilizer were applied about the middle of February. A number of these demonstration trials are located along well traveled roads in the vicinity of Dallas, and Mr. Beck is planning on putting up road signs so that interested parties may locate them easily.

Interesting Bits of News Gleaned in County Trips

(By Francis S. Barr)

Active and in good health at the age of 70, I. C. Brown, far up in the hills above Buxton, is looking forward to seeing the century mark. Long life seems to be a common thing as his father lived to be 115 years and his grandfather 106 years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Brown are doing general farming on their place.

Joseph Pongratz of Buxton was found pruning cherry trees. He told of selling two cows for beef last week which brought good prices. The cow tester is expected to visit the Pongratz farm this week. Mr. Pongratz is milking six cows at present.

It wasn't for the snow and cold weather that we did get the farmers of Washington county might just as well have not seeded this winter according to William Zuercher of Hillsboro route 1. Mr. Zuercher believes that the pests and insects would have been so numerous that the people would have had to resort to spraying by airplane in order to control the pest. That the Argus is a part of the family and would be hard to do without now was the reaction of Mrs. Hershey on route 1. The Hershey family has taken the paper for 15 years.

The weather is a much discussed topic and Mrs. George Vandehy of Forest Grove route 2 believes this is very poor weather for spring.

Mrs. J. L. Vandomelen of near Mountaineer on Cornelius route 1 was confined to her bed Friday with sinus trouble. Mr. Vandomelen states that farming has been slowed up generally, due to the bad weather.

There were many new faces at the legislature this year, according to former senator Arthur Ireland of Forest Grove, prominent dairy farmer, who returned recently from the 1935 session and took up farming again. Representing Mr. Ireland, there were only 15 carry-overs out of 90 representatives from the previous sessions. The senate also had a few new faces but made little difference as to the efficiency compared with previous years. The milk control bill passed the house 44 to 14 with two absent and went through the senate 18 to 12, voted later by the governor. In general the session turned out favorably, says Mr. Ireland.

Floors in the unit's quarters are being repainted, equipment is being polished and put in shape, and parts are being assembled for a 100-watt crystal controlled radio transmitter. Vaccination for small pox and typhoid fever now under way will result in a 100 per cent immunization for the company.

The new serge and elastic uniforms of the unit are now being worn. These are quite a contrast to the old war-time uniforms.

Rifle practice will begin in April as soon as weather permits. Approximately 85 per cent of the local company have qualified as marksmen or better with the service rifle.

The goal of perfection may be unattainable, but the struggle toward it makes us what we are.—Ex
