On April 1, Nowadays, You Needn't Worry About a Thing—April Fool!

YOU can't fool all the people all the time, but quite a number of them can be made to look silly on the first day of April.

On that day dignified men shed much of their poise when they learn that signs pinned on their backs have been fairly begging someone to kick them.

A lesson on avarice is taught those who reach greedily for a purse lying in the gutter, only to see it jerked beyond their reach.

From the sages of persons the zoo will receive calls for Messrs. Lyon, Fox, Wolf, and Campbell. And the undertaker will refuse phoned orders for a "box" with the explanation that "this is not the Tivoli Theater."

In answer to the phoned question, "Is Boo there?" other suckers will answer "Boo who?" to hear the discomfiting reply, "Oh, well, forget it if you're going to cry about it."

Practical jokers who make of April Fools' Day a Roman holiday, and their victims whose feelings are brutally sacrificed for the general good humor, will undoubtedly be interested to learn that the day of buffoonery furnished plenty of "belly laughs" for their distant ancestors.

IT'S just as hard to put the finger on the origin of April Fools' Day as on the elusive purpose mentioned above.

History relates that the Romans ran off a Festival of Fools around the idea of February. Typical entertainment of the day suggests their mode of observance. In all probability, flaming fagots thrown at the feet of bound and blindfolded victims; or Christians wandering plaintively about the Coliseum, pagand David Edmondston were chosen as the attendance and social committee for April.

Miss Helen Oliver was hostess for a social evening Friday at the church. Present were Mrs. A. J. Oliver and Mrs. Mattie Smith, Misses Helen Oliver, Mildred Rock, Caroline Horiacher, LaVonne Robinette, Margaret Cooke, Helene Shaw, Eleanor Reed, Virginia Erickson, Rosamond Mundorf, Myra Wiedewitsch, Beth Cochran, Dora Dee Selfridge, Winnie Rock and Mary Jean Doane, and Messrs. Charles Reed Jr., Byron Reed, Franklin Oliver, George Holscher, Dan Barrett, Raymond Triten, David Edmondston and Leroy Hartley.

Mrs. Ellen Vickers has returned home from a visit in Portland.

To Give Prizes Miss Helen Cowgill, assistant state club leader from Corvallis, and Mrs. Zola Morgan of Hillsboro visited the grade school Monday and looked over the work of the manual training and sewing clubs. The exhibits will be judged soon by the civic improvement club and two prizes will be given in each group for the best work during the year.

The picture of Fan Dancer Sally Rand listening modestly to what the wild waves are saying is a real April Fooler, but the others aren't. Huey Long, bottom right, seems to be sharing the wealth, but the money, given Louisiana students to finance their trip to a football game, has practically all been returned to the Kingfish. Max Haer, top right, donned a diamond uniform for a change of pace during a Florida workout. And your eyes do not deceive you; that's really the itinerant Mrs. Roosevelt, left, sitting down knitting for a change.

In Scotland, tops in April Fool jokes has been to dispatch to a "gawk" or "cuckoo," as the victim was aptly described, an anonymous check for 100 pounds; to solder a shilling to a lamp post, or to invite a Scotchman to Sunday dinner and then go away for the week-end.

But it is in America that Fool-tide observance has reached its most fiendish heights, as many of us can testify. So, unless he has a flair for practical joking, or is that rare specimen of American who can relish a good joke on himself, the smart citizen stays home with a good book that day.
