Support the Firemen

Hillsboro's fire fighters will have charge of the Fourth of July celebration this year and they have outlined a program that augurs well for continuation of this traditional event. The firemen have the responsibility for carrying on with the celebration, which has been ably and successfully operated for many years by the chamber of commerce.

They are going into the work with a determination to give the county a celebration that will be appreciated, particularly, as a homecoming event and as a goodwill affair. Their program won the hearty approval of the Fourth of July commission, which made a careful study of the celebration.

Let's all get in and give the boys the kind of co-operation they have been giving us in fire fighting for so many years.

Frank W. Connell

In the untimely death of Frank W. Connell, prominent dairyman and stock breeder, the community has lost one of its most outstanding and worthwhile native sons. Frank Connell was a good citizen and was universally liked. He gave freely of his time and service in agricultural, civic and church affairs. All who knew him will join in expressing their sympathies and regrets to the family.

The attendance of friends that filled the Methodist church to overflowing at the funeral from every section of the county and from a distance clearly attested to the standing of the deceased as neighbor and citizen.

A Good Attitude

Attitude of SERA workers as expressed in report on wages and other conditions as given in the Argus last week by a workers' committee is gratifying. In this they express themselves as being satisfied that everything possible is being done for their welfare by the local committee.

The members of the workers' committee in their contacts with local business men and in this report have exhibited a good spirit of co-operation. May the time soon come when the need for present methods of relief have passed and that all now on relief rolls will have opportunities for productive work that will bring them a more abundant life

What Other Editors Say

Farmers Are Not Blind

But the many farmers who have found renewed hope in the administration's efforts to lift them out of the mire, in which they were bogged down during the last few years of the previous administration's indifference, are no longer accepting it as inevitable that one large class of the American people should be forever doomed to produce at a loss, those products from which another small class, which does not lend a hand towards production of raw material, secures prosperity and sizable fortunes-and sometimes without any capital investand raw materials must necessarily cut down the volume on which the Big Business and other middlemen make their commission percentages, but at the same time, the actual producer-the farmer-is coming nearer to breaking even or making a slight profit than he has done in years. Unfortunately, too many of these middlemen are apt to entirely lose sight of the fact that, originally, the farmer had quite a large investment in his land and equipment, and he also had a right to expect that he would, by sheer hard work, be able to make a return on his investment. But he permitted his crops to pass into other hands the moment they were harvested, not because he was satisfied with the arrangement, but because he had heard so many times that the farmer does not have sufficient business ability to successfully market his crops-and he believed it. In a few years, however, he was forced to another conclusion, that, whatever his own lack of business ability, it would not have been possible for him to make a worse showing than the experts who could his produce brought at auction or in the market.

The Short Cut Road

Short cut roads to the beach, one by way of the Wilson river and the other over the Wolf creek route, have been designated now for a number of years. They would give to half the state's population ready access to the beaches that others further south have enjoyed for years. With the allotment of federal funds for road work the revised highway commission should give favorable consideration to immediate completion of these beach roads. The people of northwest Oregon have prayed and worked for a short cut for years. May we realize our hopes soon.

Give a Pat on the Back

It is always easy to criticize those in office and policies, but it seems to us much more logical to give officials opportunity to work out their program and to co-operate with them in bringing success to their endeavors. It is the patriotic thing to do. When we elect leaders they are entitled to support not to bulldozing and heaps of criticism before they have actually had an opportunity to succeed in their efforts. A pat on the back will help a lot more often than one may realize.

Threat of "tax secession" is what might be expected from the power mad Louisiana Kingfish. He is making all kinds of rash remarks in his attempts to discredit the Roosevelt administration. His subservient legislature and henchmen in Louisiana may bow to him and his dictatorial ways, but he will not get far with his seccession threats as that subject was thoroughly settled in the world's greatest civil war many years ago.
