Influence of the Church

Text: Acts 2:41-45; Ephesians 4:1-7, 11-16

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for May 12.

The union of faith and experience to produce fellowship explains the origin of the Christian Church...

Sometimes the faith and the experience are narrow, and the resulting movement and fellowship are sectional or sectarian.

But in the beginning the Church arose out of a very definite experience of repentance and salvation.

The Church consisted of small groups of those who had found the new experience of salvation and life in Christ Jesus.

One can hardly think of anyone joining the Church in those days except from strong conviction and because the Church represented a fellowship in something more precious than anything that the world offered.

WE need only read Paul's epistles to see how even in this primitive church, where everything connected with it seemed to involve sacrifice...

But here in our lesson, in the record of the first gathering and fellowship, we have the revelation of an ideal and practice so glorious that there seems little hope of humanity rising to it.
