At Standstill

The lumber industry, the most important in the states of Oregon and Washington, is at a standstill as the result of a strike of lumber union workers.

To bring it closer to home hundreds of Washington county mill workers are idle as the result of the strike and mills are idle. Local mills, important cogs in the development and prosperity of Washington county and its people when operating, were ordered closed down by union representatives from Portland. Relatively few of the Washington county workers are members of the union.

There may be much room for argument on both sides as there usually is to any question. However, the condition that the lumber industry is in and has been in for a number of years as to losses makes it seem to the outsider as being a particularly questionable time for strike action. Most of the mill operators claim that they have been operating at a loss for years and that to meet the demands of the union workers for increased hourly rates to 75 cents would be competitive suicide for the industry in the northwest.

is rightly claimed, must compete with minimum is $42\frac{1}{2}$ cents an hour and the of federal opportunities for co-operation. operators claim that most of them are paying 45 cents minimum, whereas they state minimum wages in British Columbia are 25 and 35 cents an hour and similar cal football. rates in southern mills. It was even brought out in the celebrated Belcher case in the south that a wage rate of 7 cents an hour was made in flaunting the NRA.

Competition under such conditions is plenty difficult. If wages could be placed on a parity every place it would be different and all should receive a more substantial wage. Why not first try to bring these other sections up to the northwest

Every possible effort is being made to bring the country back to the greatest degree of prosperity. The Federal Housing Act in which all are taking so much interest at the present time is intended to help the lumber industry, material dealers and the building trades and workers. Keeping the wheels of a great industry at a standstill does not tie in with this great business arive.

The local public may or may not be interested in the issues in the case, but it is mightily interested in the continued operation of an industry that is vitally important to the prosperity of this section.

As usual on a Hillsboro Bargain Day hundreds came, saw and profited on the many bargains offered. Hillsboro is a good trading place, having good stores with high type American citizens as employer and employes.

Dr. Boyer, president of the University of Oregon, has taken a step that should meet with general approval when he bans student "hazing" practices on the campus. It is a relic of the stone ages.

The city council is taking a forward step in the advancement and progress of Hillsboro by taking action for providing sewer facilities for that part of the city not served at present. Hiring of an engineer to make a preliminary survey and a report immediately is asked in order to make a PWA application for the project as soon as possible.

Sewage and drainage in the sections of Hillsboro not handled by the present sewer district have been a serious problem for years and steps have been taken in the past, only to be combatted by those who lelt it would be confiscatory to prop-erty. Adequate sewage facilities would make those parts of the city more desirable places to live in, would increase property values and in some cases would undoubtedly stimulate building. It is to be hoped that the council is successful in bringing about this project from a sanitary standpoint and in an effort to help the employment situation.

Presidential Bee

Oregon's junior senator, Steiwer, is acting like he has been badly bitten by the presidential bee. The senator is laying on thick in his blasts against the New Deal and attempts to point the way for a G. O. P. victory in 1936. It will be remembered that during the fight over the president's work relief program in the senate that Steiwer attacked the Bonneville dam public works designation on the ground that it was contrary to the mandate of congress in the matter of furnishing employment.
